The Ex-Husband's Revenge Chapter 281

"Congratulations," Leon said.

The progress of Mason's cultivation had been paused for six years and his true energy had accumulated to a certain level; the only reason that he had not been able to reach higher levels was because of the blockage in his internal circulation. With Leon's help, the accumulated true energy exploded, bringing Mason's cultivation level up to the Intermediate Innate State.

"Thank you for your help, Mister Wolf." Mason fell onto his knees respectfully once again. He had thought that Leon would advise him for a period of time and had not expected to reach anything more than the Initial Innate State; to his bewilderment, it only took Leon a few minutes to help Mason in ascending two levels.

Such talent was unheard of and not only was Mason thankful, his admiration for Leon grew.

"It's nothing. Don't sweat it," Leon said, feeling slightly bitter. He had just surpassed the Initial Innate State himself and had not expected Mason to rise to the Intermediate State within the blink of an eye.

Samuel slammed his palms onto the desk with a dark expression.

"Dad, a brat by the name of Leon Wolf tricked me. He reported to the Wick Group and caused this loss to our company..." Brody explained the situation. He knew that Leon was just a helpless orphan and did not think that he would possess the influence to command Jenson, so Brody merely thought that his act of raising the products' prices had enraged the Wick Group and Jenson was merely doing what duty commanded.

"Who is Leon Wolf? Sullivan Enterprises has no beef with him, so why would he report us?" Samuel asked.

"He's Marilyn's ex-husband and he has a grudge toward me..." Brody said gingerly.

Brody was concerned, feeling traumatized from his previous encounters with Leon.

"Relax, I will take charge of this and everything will go smoothly! Sometimes, violence isn't the solution and you need to be smart about it!" Samuel pointed at his head.

"Be smart about it?" Brody repeated in confusion.

"Everyone has their weaknesses. Once we find his, he can be the greatest fighter alive and it still won't help him!

"Samuel said.

Brody's eyes lit up as he giggled excitedly. "I get it. He might be an orphan, but he's just gotten himself a new girlfriend. We just need to target his girlfriend and his death is certain!"

“I. Am. Your. Worst. Nightmare!” The young woman gritted out in rage. Realizing that she could not catch up to Leon, she grabbed whatever was closest to her and flung them toward him.

The room turned into a mess within a blink of an eye.

The noises soon caught the attention of Iris, who was upstairs.

She had probably come out of the shower and walked down in a skin–tight silk gown with wet hair like a mermaid that had just come onto shore.

“Louisa, Leon, what are you two doing?” She was shocked to find the room in its state.

"He lives here? Is he your boyfriend? Are you two officially moving in together?" Louisa was shocked and scanned Leon up and down, unable to find anything special about him that might be able to impress a beauty

"What are you talking about?? We are just friends. Shut it!" Iris flushed.

"Really? I don't believe a word of that!" Louisa said suspiciously.

"Leon saved my life once and since he didn't have a place to stay, I told him that he can stay here for now..." Iris said.

“I thought that you were useless, but you are worse than I originally thought!” Louisa rolled her eyes. “It’s a good thing that I just got my license during the summer vacation, unlike you!” She lifted her chin proudly as she opened the door of the car next to her and went inside.

Leon flushed, slightly taken off-guard by Louisa’s odd temper; however, since Iris had entrusted her cousin with him, he had to follow through and reluctantly went into the car.

In Springfield University, Leon and Louisa arrived early, but it still took hours for them to complete all the necessary procedures for admission.

Louisa ran into two of her high school schoolmates that got into Springfield University as well.

Both of her schoolmates were young women. One of them was called Annie Holt, a woman with an above-average look, but a tall, slim build complimented by fashionable clothing, so one could assume that she came from a rather wealthy family; the other by the name of Lacey Paul was extremely beautiful, but seemed to come from a family that was less sufficient. She tied her hair in a ponytail and though her dress looked slightly worn from washing, she looked innocent and refreshing overall.

“You bumpkin! We are all of age now, so why can’t we go?” Louisa straightened her back proudly.

When she was younger, her parents kept a close eye on her and she could not go to a bar, but she was recently freed from their restraints and had just celebrated her eighteenth birthday.

For someone as playful as Louisa, she was determined to go to a bar out of curiosity.

“Yeah, we are technically adults now.” Annie itched to go as well.

Both Annie and Louisa came from wealthy families and were more prone to seeking excitement.

“Let’s not. Those places are dangerous. Let’s not go....” Lacey whispered.

Leon ignored the crowd and ordered drinks with mild alcohol content and some fruits.

Louisa and the other two were just students and had no habit of drinking. They had only come to the bar out of curiosity, so they did not argue with his choice of drinks.

Just then, Leon’s phone started to vibrate. He took it out and saw Cynthia’s name on the screen.

Since the music inside the bar was too loud, he could not answer the call inside.

Leon let the three women next to him know, before heading outside to answer the phone call.

"No way! Louisa, one look and anyone can tell that he's a bad person. Don't get fooled!" Leon said.

"Who are you calling a bad person?" Joseph was furious, but could tell that Leon was Louisa's acquaintance, so he calmed himself and asked, "Louisa, who is this? Who is he to you?"

"Oh, he's just a servant at my cousin's. Not worthy of our time..." Louisa snorted in contempt.

"Just a servant, huh?" Joseph sneered and waved his fist. "Brat, I'm warning you. Go away, or I'm going to beat your ass!"

Just thinking about it made him quite emotional!

Seeing as Joseph was forcefully trying to take charge, Leon decided against doing anything. He put Louis a and the other women behind him, and retreated backwards so they would not get hurt.

“Where the heck did you come from?! Do you want to die?!” Ricky was furious as he shot his subordinates a glance. They immediately surrounded Joseph.

Joseph did not waste any time, taking the initiative as he kicked Ricky right on the chest. Ricky was sent flying into the bar counter behind him. The bottles of alcohol were sent crashing to the ground.

“How dare you hit Ricky?! Brothers, let’s get this guy together!” One of the subordinates shouted angrily, getting the others to charge at Ricky fiercely.

Ricky crawled up from the ground in a pathetic manner, incredibly furious as he picked out a broken bottle from next to him and rejoined the battle.
