The Ex-Husband's Revenge Chapter 57

"Sir, I swear to you I now know that I was in the wrong... I'm already begging you here. Please save my grandpa! I promise to bear any responsibility! I won't blame you whether or not you can cure him..."

Jenson gritted his teeth and knelt in front of Leon with a thud.

"What are you doing? Get up..."

Leon was taken aback and quickly reached out to help Jenson up.

"No. I won't get up until you agree," Jenson insisted.

"But..."

Leon felt put in a tight spot. He wanted to say yes but he was not confident that he could be of any help.

He felt that it was difficult for him to refuse, as Jenson was being incredibly sincere and was one of the rare people to show filial piety.
