

THE CONTRACT MARRIAGE

Chapter 4 He Proposed Her

“I am really fine ...” Sarah wanted to break free from his big hand but found that there was nothing she could do.

“Miss, get in the car! Your injury is on your head. If you do not treat it well, your life will be in danger!” Jayson stood beside her and opened the car door for her.

“If you want more people to see you in a sorry state, you can walk back!” Christian let go of her hand and looked forward expressionlessly.

Sarah blinked weakly. She hesitated for a moment, but still lifted her foot and got into the car. Jayson immediately closed the car door, took Christian to the other side and helped him sit in the car.

The Land Rover started moving quickly, and it sped towards the hospital.

The car drove through the city and the scenery outside the window kept changing. However, Sarah's world was blank. At this moment, she could neither see nor hear. All her memories seemed to have stopped at the scene just now.

Was she a fool?

She smiled sadly. The smile on the corner of her lips was so depressing that it broke one's heart!

Nine years!

What a touching number!

Why did nine years of persistence become a cold joke to her?

The car arrived at the hospital very quickly. Sarah followed Jayson and the ice-like man to the emergency room. The doctor carefully treated her wound. He also prescribed some medicine for her. About half an hour later, Sarah sat on Christian's Land Rover and left the hospital. About ten minutes after the car drove out of the hospital, the car stopped in front of a square. Jayson opened the door and got out of the car.

"I remember your name is Sarah, right?" He rarely came back these years, but he often heard his brother Julian mention it. He had some impression of her.

"Yes ..." Sarah looked at the sky outside the window and replied woodenly.

"I came back this time to prepare to get married!"

“Okay ...” Sarah answered absent-mindedly.

“The woman you saw in the office was my fiancée!”

“Okay ...” Sarah answered softly again and her body slightly stiffened. She then quickly turned her head to look at the resolute man. She asked back in surprise, “You just said that woman is your fiancée?”

Yes, she seemed to have heard it just now. It was just that she was sad and didn’t have time to react.

Christian did not have any expression on his face. He just looked coldly at Sarah. “The day after tomorrow is our wedding day ...”

“A wedding?” Sarah smiled sadly and shook her head. Her heart turned cold again. Julian knew that the woman was his sister-in-law. He actually had a relationship with her, and even had a child!

She actually liked such a person for nine years!

“I’ve already sent out all the wedding invitations. The wedding must be held as usual. Although it’s a little sudden, you’re the most suitable person right now! I will give you one day to consider! The day after tomorrow, you’ll be my bride!”

Sarah almost choked on this person’s words. She looked at this man in disbelief!

“Even if you don’t want to accept the scene in the office just now, it is the truth! If you marry me, I will give you everything you want, other than love.”

“Are you joking with me?” Sarah did not know what kind of expression should be used to look at him. Her mind was in a mess.

This situation was too sudden and she could not recover from it for a moment.

“You have one day to think about it. If you decide now, we can go register at any time.” Christian looked straight into her eyes. His knife-like face was cold.
