Read I Am A Quadrillionarire Chapter 2534

I am a quadrillionarire chapter 2534-Strangely, Agatha's attack disappeared without a trace as the young man's voice was heard.

"David, I'm sorry. I couldn't hold out for a day like I promised you." Salem showed a look of shame.

He did not have to apologize to David initially.

However, the attack from the partial Overlord of the Marche family was unexpectedly blocked, and Arian and the others were not harmed.

No matter what method David used, or if it was the mysterious person next to him who made the move, blocking the most common attacks of the partial Overlord Realm was not something everyone could do.

Based on this, David's status was higher than imagined.

So, it would be better to be polite to him.

"Mayor Salem, don't blame yourself. It's not your fault.

You've done a good job. It's not easy to stand up against someone whose strength is so much higher than yourself," David said politely.

"I can rest assured as long as you don't blame me."

"Why would I? Mayor Salem, I can't even thank you enough, why would I blame you?"

The two exchanged some pleasantries. Then, David looked at Arian who was too scared to move.

"Arian, thank you for your kindness. From now on, your affairs will be my affairs too."

"M-Master David, you're too modest! I didn't do anything." Arian smiled bitterly.

He felt that since Salem, the city's mayor, dared to help David against the Campbell and Marche families, it showed that David really could handle this.

That was why he decided to bring his confidants here.

As a result, he unexpectedly became an eyesore and a thorn in the side of the Marche family and the Campbell family.

The old woman of the Marche family had asked Egan to kill him.

If he knew that this would happen, Arian would never have come.

It was important to have a good relationship with David, but his own life was more important.

What would be the use of this relationship if he lost his life?

It was so dangerous just now.

If David was a second late, wouldn't he be dead already?

He would not do something like this again in the future.

It would be too late for him to feel regret if a slight accident happened.

"Arian, your presence speaks for itself. As the saying goes, a friend in need is a friend indeed. A true friend will not hesitate to help when you are in the most difficult time. I, David Lidell, will remember what happened today."

David did not know what Arian was thinking, he only knew that it was enough that Arian dared to come.

As for the others, he did not want to ask.

"Master David, I feel ashamed of what you just said." Arian was a little embarrassed by the words.

He did want to help David, so there was nothing wrong with this starting point.

"Arian, let me solve the immediate troubles first and we'll catch up on the old days later."

After David finished speaking, he shifted his gaze to Agatha. The smile on his face disappeared immediately, and he said in an unfriendly tone, "I didn't expect the Marche family would send someone as strong as you. It seems that the person I killed has a high status in your family. If I had known that you would come so soon, I would have waited. How could I allow myself to cause so much trouble and almost harm Arian and Mayor Salem?"

From the moment David appeared, Agatha kept staring at the young man.

She found that she could not see through him.

She did not even know how he blocked her attack.

This made Agatha's heart sink.

One must know that she was a partial Overlord, so only the five Leila rulers could defeat her.

Even if the other partial Overlords could defeat her, it would also take some time and effort.

Although she was in The Spirit Cage which only reflected the strength of the soul, Agatha's soul power was not much weaker than other partial Overlords.

So, how could she not see through this young man?

Various indications were saying that this kid in front of her was fishy.

As for what it was, Agatha could not put her finger on it for the time being.