

Chapter 1418 Forfeit Resistance

Jeremy's sarcastic tone darkened Brandon's expression, stirring up a surge of murderous intent. Upon hearing Brandon order his bodyguards to retreat, Mandy responded in disbelief, "Brandon, do you truly trust this man? Janet is in danger. We need to have the guards secure all exits. As long as he remains here, we can apprehend him!"

Brandon was also aware of this, but now Jeremy held Janet captive. Her survival was at his mercy. He couldn't gamble with Janet's life.

Ignoring Mandy's protestations, Brandon locked his intense gaze on Jeremy. "I've instructed all the bodyguards to leave. You must ensure Janet's safety."

With a smirk, Jeremy replied, "Of course, Mr. Larson. Until later."

With that, he abruptly ended the call.

With that, he abruptly ended the call.

Jeremy stowed his phone away, a satisfied expression on his face. He glanced at Janet and mumbled, "Brandon is deeply concerned for you. I was worried he wouldn't dismiss the bodyguards, making our escape impossible. I didn't anticipate his loss of rationale when it came to your safety."

his loss of rationale when it came to your safety. He even forfeited resistance..."

Chuckling, Jeremy hit the accelerator and sped off.

As Jeremy's car stirred, Brandon's men immediately tracked his location.

Sean had been monitoring the screen. Seeing Jeremy speed off, he promptly reported to Brandon, "Mr. Larson, should I dispatch a team to intercept Jeremy now?"

Sean had even mapped out a plan to corner Jeremy, but a weary Brandon waved him off. "Let him go."

Visibly perturbed, Sean objected, "Why? If he takes Mrs. Larson to a dangerous and secluded location, we'll be helpless!"

"Enough!" A frigid glance from Brandon silenced Sean. "I want to apprehend him more than anyone else. But now is not the time. If we act hastily, Janet will be in real danger."

Jeremy was connected to the pharmacist. If he truly enraged Jeremy, the guy could easily harm Janet with some drug, putting her life at great risk!

"Why?" Sean queried, bewildered. "We outnumber him. We can certainly rescue Mrs. Larson!"

Unresponsive, Brandon stared at his phone while considering alternative solutions, seemingly oblivious to Sean's words.

Assuming that Brandon feared Jeremy's surveillance, Sean hastily offered, "If you're concerned that Jeremy's people are monitoring us, preventing us from rescuing Mrs. Larson, I'll gather a team to find them right away."

Brandon remained fixated on his phone, anxiously awaiting Jeremy's message.

His restlessness gnawed at him, yet he needed to maintain composure to rescue Janet. He couldn't lose control.

Seeing that Brandon was unresponsive, Sean grew frantic, pacing the room.

Unable to bear the tension, Mandy nudged Sean and gestured for him to follow her to a corner.

Sean nodded in comprehension and trailed Mandy to a secluded corner.

Mandy relayed the entire conversation between Jeremy and Brandon to Sean.

Fear washed over Sean, turning him pale. "What?"
