Chapter 71

Renee took a deep breath and walked into Stefan's office.

Stefan's slender body stood in front of the bright french window. His broad shoulders and long legs gave him a dashing appearance.

However, the chilly air emanating from his entire body lowered the temperature in the office to a freezing point. It appeared the big iceberg knew everything now.

However, Renee did not panic. She calmly took out the share transfer contract and said to his back as if nothing had happened, "Mr. Hunt, if you're free right now, please sign this. We should split up the assets cleanly now so that the divorce can proceed without a hitch."

Stefan turned around. The sun added a bit of warmth to his cold, handsome face, making him look even more charming. "Why are you in such a hurry to get the divorce? Don't you think you should explain yourself first?"

"Explain myself?"

Renee's expression was calm. She had nothing to lose anymore. "There's nothing to explain. Number one, Elon Barnes asked you for $7 million of his own accord. I have nothing to do with it. You can believe what you want."

"Number two, the vulnerabilities in H Group's customer database have always been there. It's only a matter of time before it's attacked. I'm just making you aware of the ticking time bomb in advance. If you want to retaliate, feel free to do so."

"Number three, the divorce agreement stated in black and white that the law firm belongs to me. Even if you don't sign the papers now, the court will eventually enforce it anyway."

Stefan stared at Renee with a deep gaze and a very complicated expression. After a long while, he coldly said, "What are you talking about?"

"Was my explanation not clear enough? Make your move! Stop wasting time!"

Renee expected that Stefan, who always paid his debts, would not let her get away scot-free. She could only wait for him to take action so that she could deal with it.

St

rowned and said in a chilly voice, "The hacker just now said you're his ex-girlfriend, e reason why you agreed to the divorce so easily is so that you two can get back together... I want to hear your explanation."

"What?! His ex-girlfriend?!"

Renee was so surprised that she almost choked on her own saliva.

"That's what he told you?"

"What else should he have told me?"

"Lies! Absolute lies!"

Renee raised two fingers and said sincerely, "I swear, I don't even know him that well. If I'm lying, my future husband will die a long, painful death!"

Stefan: "..."

Somehow, he felt like he was the one being cursed.

However, judging by Renee resolute attitude, she was probably telling the truth. His gloomy face softened a little.

"Umm... besides that nonsense, did he say anything else?"

Renee asked carefully.

"No."

"Good. Good."

Renee breathed a sigh of relief.

A false alarm! It was a false alarm!

It appeared that, even though Haze always had a lackadaisical attitude, he was not that bad of a person. Maybe this was what they call "honor among thieves".

Stefan suddenly walked up to Renee and forced her step back towards the desk. He asked in a low voice, "From the way you say it, it sounds like there were a lot of stories between you two?"

"Absolutely not!"

Renee shook her head, her cheeks turning slightly red. Why did this guy suddenly move so close?

at did you two talk about while you were alone earlier?" As he said that, he moved even closer to her.

Through the clothes and fabric, she could feel the warmth of his body and his heartbeat.

The atmosphere in the room was strange.

'Dammit, what is this situation? Is it really appropriate for two people who are about to get a divorce to be this close?'

Just as Renee thought he was going to kiss her, Stefan returned to his usual aloof demeanor. He seemed to be in a good mood as he said, "Give me the papers."

Chapter 72

"What papers?"

Renee felt like a fish that could breathe again. She was finally able to think normally. Her bright eyes were focused. "Didn't you want me to sign the share transfer contract? Give me the papers before I change my mind!"

Stefan's words were cold and proud.

He actually agreed?!

Renee could not believe it. She quickly handed him the contract and a pen in a respectful manner.

"If you would, Mr. Hunt!"

She did not even dare to breathe too loudly during the process lest the temperamental man went back on his word due to a perceived slight!

Stefan signed the contract with a cold face and then said without any emotion, "You better not advertise the content of our divorce agreement to the public. If you want anything, just tell it to me straight. There's no need to play dirty!"

His words struck her like ice cones, cold and painful.

Renee froze.

She thought the reason he signed the share transfer contract so readily was because he did not believe any of Elon Barnes' nonsense.

Unfortunately... it seemed like he still did not believe her.

However, it did not matter anymore. Renee had no intention of explaining herself any further. They were about to get a divorce anyway, so it no longer mattered how he saw her.

She guessed the reason he signed the contract so quickly was because he wanted to make sure the divorce would go smoothly.

"Thank you, Mr. Hunt, for your cooperation. Barring any accidents, we'll only have to see each other one last time – on the day we get the divorce certificate. After that, we'll have nothing to do with each other anymore.

Renee put the signed contract away and left without looking back.

Stefan's icy gaze fell on the woman's back and remained in that direction long after she left. He could see how eager she was to leave him.

It made him curious. She was willing to give up $40 million in alimony and only wanted the law firm. What was she thinking? Did she not know how useless and eccentric the partners of Hunts & Co. Law Firm were? Could she really deal with them? The next day.

Renee got up early. She put on her best professional makeup and flat leather shoes and headed to the Hunts & Co. Law Firm with vigor.

Despite being a former subsidiary of II Group, the law firm actually operated independently.

In addition to handling legal issues for II Group, the lawyers there also accepted personal cases. The law firm only needed to share their profit with II Group based on their annual revenue and expenditure.

Over the years, probably because they were backed by the behemoth that was H Group, the lawyers there gradually grew complacent. They had even stopped accepting personal cases altogether. Everyday, all they did was waste time. This resulted in the law firm not only making no profit, they were even sustaining losses every year.

At the end of each year, the three eccentric partners of the law firm, who barely showed themselves all year, would suddenly pop up to ask H Group for money.

H Group had long wanted to get rid of these useless leeches, but unfortunately, they were bound by contract.

Therefore, the law firm was like a hot potato by taking the law firm off their hands.

H Group. Renee had actually done them a favor

Based on the address, Renee found the law firm in a run-down office building outside the Fourth Ring Road.

She looked up and saw a sign that said "Hunts & Co. Law Firm". It was rusty and looked like it could fall off at any moment.

As expected of a place housing worthless trash!

But that only made Renee even more enthusiastic.

She stepped into the law firm and saw that there was no one inside except for a cleaner who was currently cleaning the desks.

After a while, a lawyer finally arrived. Before she could speak, the lawyer took a look at her and told her flatly, "If you want to file a lawsuit, go to the law firm next door. We're not accepting clients today."

Renee pursed her lips and did not respond. She walked up to the cleaner who was cleaning the desks and said, "Mr. Wayne, can I have a word?"

Chapter 73

The man's clothes were plain and he was wearing a face mask. He was patiently wiping the leaves of a plant on the desk, making sure each leaf was spotless clean.

Hearing Renee's voice, he gently raised his eyes and looked over curiously. "The new boss of Hunts & Co. Law Firm, I presume? The poor woman about to be abandoned by Stefan Hunt?"

Renee felt a little awkward. She cleared her throat softly and said, "The second part was unnecessary."

The man put down the spray bottle and took off his mask. His middle-age face looked kind and gentle, exactly as the information said.

From the information Liam sent her, Renee knew that the Hunts & Co. Law Firm had three two men and a woman partners and this John Wayne was one of them. (1)

Among the three partners, John Wayne was the oldest and the most experienced. He looked like he would be easy to get along with, but he was actually the most cunning one.

John said, "I'm curious. We haven't met before and I'm dressed like this, so how did you recognize me?"

"It's simple."

Renee told him honestly, "Being your new boss, I've looked into all of you. I know that John Wayne is a plant lover. An ordinary cleaner wouldn't have made sure every leaf was spotless clean."

"Hah. Interesting."

John stared at Renee, the interest in his eyes growing stronger. He smiled and said, "Lass, if you've really looked into us, you would know that we're a difficult bunch to deal with. If you're smart, you should stay away from us."

"What can I say? I've always loved a challenge."

Renee's voice was passionate and her eyes sparkled with excitement. She looked bright and tenacious, like a determined young leopard who would not give in.

After all, in her veins flowed the blood of General Maurice Everheart. Her indomitable personality was engraved into her genes!

Stefan Hunt couldn't do it in three years. You really think you can change us?"

"I don't need three years. I'll do it in three days!" Renee proclaimed with confidence.

"I commend your courage, young woman. Good luck," John said meaningfully and left.

The Hunts & Co. Law Firm was indeed like a hot potato.

The three partners being absent more often than not was not the only problem. The lawyers working under them were all tough nuts to crack too. None of them took their new boss seriously.

The only one who was respectful to her was a trainee lawyer called Warrick.

It was time for the morning meeting but there was still not a lawyer to be seen in the spacious office.

Warrick cautiously told Renee, who was sitting at the conference table, "Boss, Mr. Rosenwell said there's a match today, so he gathered everyone in preparation for the live stream this evening, so... so he said he wouldn't be coming to the office today."

“A match?”

Renee raised her eyebrows and asked, “Are you talking about the LCL Season 7 Spring Split Grand Finals?”

“Warrick’s eyes widened in surprise, “How do you know, boss? Do you follow e-sports too?””

After all, LCL was a niche game that had a steep learning curve. Only true game enthusiasts pay attention to it.

How could a wealthy housewife like his new boss know about it?

Renee’s lips curled into a faint smile. She only said, “Okay, tell Mr. Rosenwell and the others to enjoy the match. I’ll treat them to some snacks to this evening.”

At 9:00 pm, the LCL Spring Split Grand Finals reached its climax, with Team Raging Storm from Aeos trailing Team Victory from Varangia 1:2.

The club was crowded. At the last second, Team Raging Storm managed to turn the tables and wipe out Team Victory, winning the championship. The place erupted in cheers.

“World Champion! Well done, Team Raging Storm!”

Renee suddenly arrived with champagne and sashimi. Zack

Rosenwell was cheering fanatically.

Among the three partners of the law firm, he was the youngest, but his professional skills were very highly-regarded in the industry, and that gave rise to his arrogance.

How arrogant was he? He would not even give Stefan the time of day, let alone Renee.

“Team Raging Storm won the championship! We have to celebrate. I brought champagne and sashimi for everyone.” Renee stood in the center of the club and addressed everyone there enthusiastically, Zack sneered. “As if you know anything about Team Raging Storm. Have you even played the game before?”

Renee smiled. “Not only do I know about Team Raging Storm, we’re actually old friends.”

“Yeah, right. Why don’t you try coming up with a more convincing lie?”

“If I manage to invite Team Raging Storm to the club, can you promise me one thing?” Renee’s lips curled into a mysterious smile.

Chapter 74

Three days passed.

The Sporadic Star Bar was a relatively famous bar in Beach City. It was an elegant and artistic- looking two-story establishment.

Xavier Stuart and Christopher Jacobs were currently sitting in the VIP area on the second floor. Not only did it have a great view, it also provided a certain level of privacy.

The two already had a few drinks, but Stefan, who had agreed to meet them here, was still nowhere to be found.

“What’s up with Stefan? This is the first time in four years us Golden Trio are meeting up with just the three of us. He wouldn’t stand us up, would he?”

Xavier was holding a glass of wine with a slightly anxious expression. He kept looking towards the entrance.

“I asked to see him today because I have something important to talk to him about. If I don’t take care of this, my father will surely break my leg when I go home tonight!”

Christopher, being the oldest in the Golden Trio, was as calm as ever. He said unhurriedly,” Bro, calm down. You know how Fan is. If he doesn’t feel like it, he simply won’t come. It’s not the first time he’s stood us up.”

Xavier could not calm down. Only Stefan could take care of his problem for him.

“This won’t do. I’m gonna give him a call!”

He took out his phone and called Stefan.

At the other end of the phone, Stefan was busy with work. His words were cold and a bit rushed. He told them to drink by themselves first, and if he could not get there in time, they did not have to wait for him.

“Man, are you really gonna stand us up?!”

Xavier was racking his brains trying to think of a way to get his workaholic friend to come when he saw about five or six people walking in from the bar entrance, all of them bright and youthful.

What surprised Xavier was the sight of the black-haired woman in white dress among them. It was actually Renee!

the moment, Renee had a bright smile on her face as she whispered something to a man around her age. They seemed very intimate.

Stefan was about to hang up, so Xavier quickly added with some excitement, “Bro, you’ve gotta come, or you’re gonna lose your woman! Your dear little wife is going around hugging different men right now! She’s having a great time!”

At the other end of the phone, there was a moment of silence, followed by the sound of a laptop closing. “Sporadic Stars Bar, right? I’ll be right there.”

Christopher had also seen Renee by now, and a smile appeared on his gentle face. “Fan’s wife seems to be a little different since the last time we saw her. What an interesting young woman.”

Downstairs, Renee and Zack chose a booth for eight people.

It had only been three days since Renee met the lawyers. Three days ago, they looked down on her, but now, she had become the life of the party. She was the one everyone revolved around.

The arrogant Zack was now behaving like her lackey. He was constantly trying to please her.

“Boss, everything’s taken care of. I’ve handled the matter exactly as you instructed. Can you invite Team Raging Storm over for another game sometime so that us mortals can feast our eyes upon your godly skills?”

Three days ago, Renee managed to invite Team Raging Storm over with just a phone call. Team. Raging Storm, who had just won the world championship! Not only that, Team Raging Storm’s captain even respectfully referred to Renee as “Master”!

When the young lawyers saw that, they almost bowed down to Renee. From then on, they saw Renee as a “forefather of e- sports” and their admiration for her shot through the roof.

Renee picked up a glass of juice and touched Zack’s glass with it. With a smile, she said, “That will depend on your performance.”

Before taking over the law firm, Renee had conducted a comprehensive research of every member in the firm.

The members of the law firm were all young people in their twenties except for John Wayne and Sandra Lee, who were slightly older.

Zack Rosenwell was the youngest among the three major partners of the law firm. He was undefeated in court, but he was a noob in video games.

Although he was a noob, he loved playing video games. He would lead the group of young lawyers to play video games all day.

From the beginning, Renee knew that as long as she could make Zack obey her, the group of young lawyers would naturally obey her too.

What better way to convince Zack to listen to her than to insta-kill his idol in front of him in the game?

Therefore, she was not surprised at all that she was able to make these rebellious lawyers submit to her in just three days.

Renee and the lawyers were having a good time when a certain figure walked into the bar.

Stefan stood there, tall and handsome. He immediately saw Renee sitting in the middle of the group, surrounded by the others like the moon being surrounded by stars.

Chapter 75

Stefan frowned slightly after a hint of surprise flashed across his cold face.

What have Renee done? Why was Zack Rosenwell willing to pour drinks for her?

Three years ago, when H Group acquired the Hunts & Co. Law Firm, Zack Rosenwell left a deep impression on Stefan due to his arrogance and lack of respect.

However, because Zack's professional capabilities were so outstanding – he would easily help H Group solve all kinds of legal issues – Stefan simply let him be.

All these years, Stefan had always left the Hunts & Co. Law Firm alone. He did not care how much money they made as long as they could be useful in crucial moments.

But those lawyers simply turned the law firm into a “retirement home”. Not only did the law firm not make money, it was losing money every year!

Renee actually gave up $40 million dollars and a luxury house in exchange for this law firm. In Stefan's opinion, it was so not worth it.

He was sure that there was no way Renee could deal with the difficult people in the law firm, considering her capabilities. When that happened, Renee would naturally admit defeat and come to him to re-discuss the distribution of assets.

But now, it seemed like Renee had pretty much done it... in only three days?

Renee and the lawyers did not notice Stefan's arrival. Stefan did not go over to greet them either. Instead, he headed straight for the VIP area on the second floor.

Xavier had been waiting for him. He was full of complaints. “Bro, you're finally here. When we asked you to come, you said you're busy, but when it concerns your little darling wife, you came immediately!”

“It has nothing to do with her.”

Stefan replied coldly as he took a seat.

The seat he chose was right across from the booth where Renee and the lawyers were in, enabling him to see their every move. From the moment he sat down, Stefan's gaze had never left Renee, as if his eyes had been locked in place.

Downstairs, Renee was surrounded on all sides. She was smiling brilliantly, like a blooming flower, bright and charming.

+15 BONUS

Her white skirt was pure, while her red lips were seductive. The two contrasting elements blended into her, making her seem... so alluring!

Was that how she took care of those eccentric lawyers?

When he thought of that, Stefan's gaze tightened. He took a sip of wine with an expression of displeasure. A strange feeling rose in his heart.

“Bro, are you even listening to me?”

Xavier's waved his hand in front of Stefan's face. He then continued bravely, “From the moment you sat down, all you've been doing was stare at her. We should just call you Starefan! Stop ignoring your friends!”

Only then did Stefan realize that he seemed to have been paying too much attention to that woman.

He withdrew his gaze and turned to Xavier, asking him in a cold voice, “What were you saying again?”

Xavier quickly said, “Bro, I remember you have a law firm, and there's a lawyer named Zack Rosenwell working in your law firm, right? Dude, I'm in trouble. Can you ask that guy to represent me in a case? I can't lose this case or I'm done for!”

“I can get you a lawyer, but Zack Rosenwell...”

Stefan had a complicated expression as he said, “I'm afraid he won't take orders from me.” “No way! You're his boss!”

Xavier seemed really worried. He said helplessly, “Dude, I'll tell you honestly. It's the new club I opened. A woman died from alcohol overdose from drinking too much. Now, her family's taking us to court. The situation is very unfavorable for us!”

“I have a good relationship with the judge, so he secretly hinted to me that in this type of cases, our side would usually lose. There was only one example of the defendant winning – it was a case Zack Rosenwell took on years ago...”

Xavier was about to lose it.

He came from a family of politicians. His family had always been strict. His father nagged him every day for not working a proper job.

If his father found out that he actually had the audacity to open an entertainment club and the club had even caused death, his father would definitely break his legs and confine him forever!

Christopher chimed in, “Try and ask the lawyer to help him, Fan. After all, if the lawyer is someone we know personally, there will be fewer problems.”

Stefan pursed his thin lips and said no more.

Downstairs, Renee's group was becoming more and more lively. They were now playing a drinking game.

Stefan's face hardened. He could not sit still anymore.

He picked up a glass of wine and told the dispirited Xavier, “Let's go.”
