

Chapter 38 Waylen Is Coming Back

Harold found himself overcome with a sense of melancholy.

Leaning against the headboard of the bed, he enjoyed the attention his lovely fiancée pampered him with as she dutifully fed him with some food and water. Her actions defied the expectations of a spoiled young lady from a wealthy family.

Cecilia's beauty captivated Harold, and he couldn't help but feel grateful for her presence.

Instructing his men to leave, Harold drew closer to Cecilia, pressing his body against hers.

Blushing, she traced her slender fingers along his chest, softly urging him, "Please, get up! Your waist is wounded."

Harold's eyes held a deep intensity, brimming with a mix of desire and aggression.

The atmosphere quickly turned intimate, and their passion consumed them. Hours passed as Harold's fervor showed no sign of abating, until they finally succumbed to exhaustion. Panting softly, Cecilia nestled in his arms, her demeanor shifting to that of a shy and spoiled child. "What has gotten over you today?"

He replied lazily, "Nothing at all. I simply missed you."

She then planted kisses on his face.

Leaning close to him, she whispered, "Waylen is coming back in about two days. I want you to come and join us for dinner. He's got some projects that would suit you. Just make sure you behave well, okay?"

Harold nodded in agreement.

Cecilia knew he disliked excessive clinginess, so she spent only half a day with him before reluctantly bidding him farewell.

Sitting in the luxurious black limousine, she couldn't resist reaching out to Waylen.

He had actually turned off his phone for an important meeting, but by chance, he turned it back on just as she called.

He answered it and asked, "Cecilia, what's up?"

"Waylen, I need your help," Cecilia softly implored, her slender finger tracing circles in the air.

Waylen loosened his tie and inquired, "What's wrong? Has someone or something been bothering you?"

"Harold was injured! I asked him who did it, but he refused to tell me," Cecilia confided, mentioning Harold's name cautiously.

Upon hearing Harold's name, Waylen remained silent since he really didn't care.

Cecilia muttered to herself, "So much has happened today! You know what? I ran into Tyrone earlier. He mentioned that Rena's father committed suicide in the detention center. Rena is in such a pitiful state." 1

The man froze, his voice barely a whisper as he asked, "What did you say?"

Without hesitation, Cecilia repeated, "I said that Tyrone's girlfriend's father committed suicide in the detention center. She is truly pitiable."

Waylen fell silent for a long while. Eventually, he informed Cecilia that he had urgent matters to attend to and that he had to go, leaving Cecilia feeling anxious.

"But I haven't told you why I called," she said anxiously.

"We can discuss it next time," was his curt response.

Attempting to contact Rena, he found her phone turned off.

He then dialed Hyatt directly, seeking information.

Hyatt informed him of the situation and offered a knowing smile. "Waylen, this is the perfect opportunity for you to help her."

Waylen's smile held a tinge of bitterness. "Don't tease me," he muttered. ①

After ending the call, he immediately instructed his secretary Jazlyn to book a flight for that night. The secretary, surprised by the sudden decision, argued, "But Mr. Fowler, don't forget you have the trial tomorrow morning."

Hearing this, his realization hit him like a jolt of lightning.

He had been working on this case for an entire month, and its outcome would be revealed on the trial the following day. He couldn't afford to leave right now.

After pondering for a moment, Waylen wrote a note for his secretary.

"Fly to Duefron tomorrow morning to find Miss Gordon. Here is her address and phone number. Ask her to call me!" 1

Having seen Rena before, Jazlyn smiled and commented, "Miss Gordon is truly beautiful!"

Waylen glanced at her briefly.

This caused Jazlyn to retreat, refraining from further comments.

As Jazlyn left, Waylen returned his attention to preparing for the court trial the next morning. However, he made intermittent calls to Rena every hour or two, desperately trying to reach her.
