

Chapter 755 The Battlefield

Outside the safe house, in the midst of the battlefield, the Hoffman family found themselves in a vulnerable position. Liam, armed with his pistol, stood watch at the safe house's entrance, offering long-distance support.

But despite his remarkable marksmanship, his efforts only posed a limited threat to the enemy. Each precise shot he fired could only eliminate one adversary at a time.

It became clear that he couldn't alter the overall outcome of the Hoffman family's current predicament.

At that critical moment, a nurse stumbled out and urgently announced, "Sir, the baby has been delivered!" Liam's heart raced, and he hurried into the safe house. After gazing tenderly at Julie and their newborn, he decisively instructed the doctor, "Take Julie and our son away through the secret passage and wait for me to retrieve you. If I don't return, do not come back here. Stay as far away as possible!"

Tears welled in Julie's eyes as she tightly clutched

Liam's hand. She pleaded, "Liam, you must come back to me safely!"

Liam replied with gentle reassurance, "Don't worry, my dear. Look after our child and ensure your safety."

With those words, Liam cast one more affectionate look at Julie and their child before exiting the safe house.

He had conveyed those sentiments to Julie because ever since the attack began, he had been plagued by a sense of unease. This unease didn't arise from Rohan's strength, but rather from Rohan's unwavering confidence.

Despite being clearly outmatched and the Hoffman family's formidable strength, Rohan had dared to return.

Liam couldn't shake the feeling that Rohan held some hidden cards up his sleeve.

Julie also sensed an unease. But for the sake of their child, she followed the medical team's instructions. She understood that staying behind would only further burden Liam.

On the battlefield, Liam descended among the enemy like the embodiment of death.

With no more constraints, he could finally unleash his full lethal prowess.

His primary target was Rennes, a notorious villain responsible for numerous atrocities who had somehow survived to this day.

Liam rapidly closed the distance to Rennes. With an extraordinary burst of power in his lower legs, he materialized in front of Rennes in the blink of an eye and delivered a punch accompanied by a howling wind.

The overwhelming air pressure overwhelmed Rennes, whose face turned ashen. But he had no time to react.

Boom!

Rennes' head, bearing a look of utter astonishment, was forcefully severed from his body!

With a single punch, Rennes' neck was obliterated, and blood splattered in all directions.

Rennes was dead!

Such a gruesome demise left the surrounding enemies quivering, involuntarily swallowing and momentarily paralyzed by fear.

Liam wouldn't allow them to catch their breath. He swiftly moved across the battlefield, leaving a trail of carnage in his wake, and bolstering the Hoffman family's morale as they began to turn the tide of the battle.

However, Liam's actions inevitably drew Rohan's attention. Strangely, Rohan did not appear perturbed. Instead, the very next moment, he proactively intercepted Liam in mid-air, engaging him in a fierce clash.

Bang!

Rohan was unceremoniously sent falling to the floor, stumbling back several dozen paces, nearly losing his balance.

Strangely, Rohan displayed no fear, but rather a wicked smile crossed his face as he declared, "I concede that you're formidable, but today, you, your wife and child will all meet your ends!"

Liam, seething with rage and a deep desire for vengeance, wasted no time and launched a direct, full-force assault on Rohan in response to his provocative words.