Novel My baby's daddy chapter 2388 -"I'm so sorry, Miss Presgrave. I'm truly sorry." Sasha sobbed while putting Willow into a trash can and pushing it out. Then, she drove out of the underground garage. She had placed Willow into the trunk, knowing the bodyguards only checked incoming vehicles and wouldn't inspect outgoing ones.

They wouldn't have known that Willow was already in the car.

Sasha had been working as a maid in the Presgrave Family for twenty years. After Willow was born, she had worked diligently here. The Presgrave Family treated her very well, and her remuneration was pretty high. However, when faced with the kidnapping of her son and husband, she made the decision to save her family's lives.

She was forced to do something illegal against her conscience. She knew that the Presgrave Family was in danger this time, but she was simple-minded. She felt the young lady of the Presgrave Family wouldn't easily come to harm, for she was a person of value and status.

At most, she might suffer a bit, and the Presgrave Family would pay a large ransom to rescue her.

As Sasha passed through the main gate, she behaved as usual, and the bodyguards didn't inspect her car. The focus now was on external security, so they overlooked this detail, making it possible to kidnap Willow.

Sasha drove the car away. Since there were no surveillance cameras in Willow's room, no one knew that Willow was gone.

Sasha quickly drove toward the city center. At this moment, Jared had just finished putting his son to sleep in the third-floor living room of the Presgrave Family and was preparing to go downstairs for a drink.

At the thought of Willow being confined to her room and most likely worried about Jasper until she wouldn't eat or drink, Jared wanted to invite her downstairs for a bite. He pushed open the door and expected to find his sister on the bed or the sofa where she usually lazed, but she was nowhere to be found.

“Willy?” He stepped into the room and called his sister’s name.

However, there was no response in the room. Jared frowned and was about to leave when he saw her phone, which she always kept with her, lying on the sofa.

He picked up his sister’s phone and quickly searched the entire floor. After questioning the maids, he found out that no one had seen Willow.

Jared felt something amiss and immediately called Ricky, the head of the security team, to review the surveillance footage and find out where his sister had gone off to.

Ricky was in the control room, and he immediately accessed the surveillance video from ten minutes ago. He saw Sasha first bringing tea into Willow’s room. Shortly after, the woman wheeled a trash can inside.

This was highly unusual. Willow’s room required meticulous cleaning, and she wouldn’t have allowed a large trash can inside. Something was definitely amiss.

He quickly reviewed Sasha’s actions in the next ten minutes and saw that her car had been parked in a blind spot from where she had left two minutes later.

Ricky immediately reported this to Jared, who felt that something had happened to his sister. He picked up his phone and activated a signal. It was a tracking signal every Presgrave carried with them, and it could trace their exact location.

Sure enough, it showed that Willow was heading toward the city center.

Unexpectedly, they had failed to prevent the nanny, who had been working for the Presgrave Family for over twenty years, from slipping through their security at this critical moment.

Jared’s handsome face darkened, and he immediately assembled ten bodyguards to start searching for his sister.

Sasha’s phone was now unreachable, but based on Willow’s location, Jared immediately ordered the company’s bodyguards to intercept Sasha’s car.

Meanwhile, a black SUV followed behind Sasha's car. The driver was directing Sasha to take Willow to a designated location.

At this moment, Jasper kicked open the door on the sixth floor of an apartment building and saw Sirius tied to a chair, a miniature bomb strapped to him. Though it was small, its explosive power was enough to bring down the entire apartment.

"Don't mind me. You need to go," Sirius said to Jasper calmly. The countdown on the bomb had already reached five minutes, and disarming this bomb was extremely difficult.
