Corinne clenched her fists. She then quickly took out her phone to call Jeremy, who she previously had no intention of ever contacting again.

Jeremy picked up soon enough, but he did not greet or say anything to her.

“Jeremy Holden, just what do you think you’re doing?” Corinne asked angrily.

“So that’s how you’re going to address me from now on? Is this your way of showing me you don’t want to be with me anymore?”

Jeremy asked raspily.

Corinne did not call him to talk about that!

“Mister Jeremy, we’re not kids anymore. Don’t you think it’s very childish of me to keep me under house arrest just because you’re angry at me?”

“Heh. And here I thought you didn’t know I was angry at you,” replied Jeremy sarcastically. Corinne tried to suppress her anger as she knew it would just make things worse.

“Call off your men! I need to go out.”

“For what?”

“Since when do I need to report to you every little detail of what I plan to do? Where’s my freedom in all of this?”

“The moment you married me, you gave up your freedom. After all, it’s normal for a husband and wife to keep a tight leash on each other,” replied Jeremy in a neutral tone.

“Jeremy Holden! We’re not legally married, so you have no right to take away my freedom!” shouted Corinne, unable to hold back her anger anymore.

“Just stay at home. I’ll come back to visit you once I find the time,” he said coldly.

After that, he hung up the phone.

Corinne was so furious that she nearly threw her phone down.

‘That b*stard! What right does he have to treat me like this? So this is his true color, huh? Oh, what a fool I am to have fallen for his nice-guy act!’ thought Corinne, gritting her teeth. She then told herself to calm down; it was more important to think of a way out than to mentally berate herself.

Meanwhile, at Newmoon Group, Aaron was drinking coffee. For some reason unknown to him, he was feeling very anxious. He walked out of his office to look for Xante.

As soon as he pushed open his door, he saw a subordinate of his flirting with Annie, who—judging by her laughing—did not seem to mind the least.

Aaron found this weird. In the past, she would have ignored any flirting coming her way. He narrowed his eyes, curious as to why Annie would still work there after how he treated her. The subordinate's expression immediately became serious when he realized Aaron was staring at them.

He then cleared his throat, greeted Aaron, and took the files Annie prepared for him back to his seat.

Annie was startled to see Aaron standing there too.

She quickly got up and bowed to him. "Is there anything I can do for you, Mister Aaron?" she said professionally.

Aaron smiled and walked over to her. "Not at the moment. But I must say, I'm quite surprised to see you here."

“I quite like the perks and benefits this job provides, so unless the company fires me, I have no reason to resign,” replied Annie politely.

Aaron raised his eyebrow. “Won’t it be better for you to work at your uncle’s company? I’m sure he’ll arrange for you to work in a better position with a higher salary. Plus, you won’t need to make coffee for anyone there.”

“You’re right, Mister Aaron. My uncle would do what you said, but I don’t want to live under his protection forever. I want to learn how to be independent,” explained Annie.

Aaron was quite impressed by her attitude. “Huh, not bad. Was your colleague flirting with you just now?”

The sudden change of topic shocked Annie. “No. He was asking me for help with his document. His stapler was broken, you see.”

Aaron obviously did not believe her. “He’s quite the catch. He graduated from a famous university. Good-looking. Tall. You can consider him since our company has no policy against office romance.”

Annie’s gaze wavered for a second before her eyebrows furrowed as she frowned. She felt unbelievably humiliated, but she did not blow up at Aaron. She simply nodded and said, “Okay. I’ll consider him if he shows signs of being interested in me. Thank you for your concern, Mister Aaron.”

After a moment of awkward silence, Aaron smiled and said, “Well, time for you to get back to work now. If anyone comes to find me, tell me I’m at Xante’s office.”

“Yes, Mister Aaron.”

Aaron started making his way over to Xante’s office. At some point, he tugged at his tie to loosen it. For some reason, he felt like he was suffocating. Xante’s office was only a few steps from his. Given their relationship, he never knocked to announce his arrival.

Instead, he simply opened the door and said, “Hey Xante, did the boss call you? I don’t know why but I’ve been feeling an—”

He stopped talking at the shocking sight before him.

Xante was pinned to the floor-to-ceiling window by a man who was sucking and kissing her neck.

'I know that guy! He's Sunny Rivera!' thought Aaron in shock.

When Xante noticed Aaron had barged in, she calmly pushed Sunny away and straightened her clothes before sitting down on her chair.

"Well, finish what you started. You've been feeling...?" prompted Xante after taking a sip of her coffee.

Aaron snapped out of his trance. "Umm... I've been feeling anxious. I'm worried Jeremy would do something to hurt the boss."

Xante pushed up her gold-rimmed glasses. "Me too. I'm planning to call the boss later."

However, Aaron was obviously interested in something else by that point. He looked teasingly at the hickey on Xante's neck before walking over and poking it.

"Tsk, tsk! I never knew you were so wild, Xante."

Xante frowned and was about to say something when Sunny slapped Aaron's hand away.

"Keep your hands off her! You have no right to touch her!" said Sunny protectively.

Instead of being angry, Aaron laughed. "And you do? Is that why you were kissing her just now?" he asked with a smirk.

Sunny's face immediately turned red from the teasing. "At least I... I have more rights than you! Just... Just keep your boundaries in the future!"

Aaron raised his eyebrow. "Why do you have more right than I do?"

Sunny's face turned even red. "B—Because she...she's my g..."

Aaron grinned wider. "Yes? Go on. She's your, what?"

Sunny was too proud to finish his sentence, so he nudged Xante. "Hey, tell him what we are!"

Chapter 1123

Aaron looked at Xante. “So are you guys together?” Xante sipped her coffee before replying indifferently, “Nope.”

Aaron laughed. He then looked smugly at Sunny. “Did you hear that? She said you guys aren’t together.”

He did not need to fan the flames since Sunny was already angry as it was. “How can you say that? Have you forgotten what we did that day? You... You..."

The more he tried to explain himself, the redder his face got until he finally gave up.

"Oh, shut up and sit down! I'm trying to work here," chided Xante with annoyance.

Sunny did as she said. He plumped down on the sofa, fuming.

Xante turned her attention to Aaron. "Is there anything else I can help you with?"

Aaron glanced at Sunny with twinkling eyes. "Xante, you dirty dog. He's just a kid," he whispered teasingly.

Xante gave him the death glare. "Oh, please. He's practically an adult. Plus, do you think I'm enjoying this? You don't know how much I wish I could shake him off!"

Aaron laughed. "When did this happen? I can't say I ever saw you two talking."

Xante frowned. "You remember that day at the hotel? He came after you left, and then..."

Aaron was burning with the desire to know what happened next. "And then you decided to..."

"Hold on, hold on. Don't get me the wrong way. I only planned to tease him a little, but he then forced me into it!"

Aaron tutted and looked at her skeptically.

Since they were very good friends, they did not pay any mind to their personal spaces and would sometimes unconsciously move closer to each other while talking. Normally, this would not arouse any suspicions, but to Sunny, it was akin to breaking the law.

His eyes widened in anger when he saw Aaron standing so close to Xante. He then got up and pointed at him, saying, “Why do you need to stand so close to her? She’s not deaf! Move your face away from hers!”

The angrier Sunny got, the more Aaron—being the troublemaker he was—wanted to tease him.

Aaron deliberately put his arm around Xante’s waist. “But I like being close to her. Before she knew you, we’d share a bed sometime. It’s a pity you met her too late, Mister Sunny.”

“Why you!” That was the final straw for Sunny. With his anger rising, he rushed over to free Xante. “Get up! Let go of her!”

Aaron scooped Xante up into his arms. “Make me,” he taunted.

“Argh! You piece of sh*t! Let go of my girlfriend! How many times do I have to tell you to keep your hands off her!” In a fit of panic, Sunny let slip the word ‘girlfriend’.

Aaron finally got what he wanted. He put down Xante, whose expression was twisted, and said, "Oh, so she's your girlfriend! You should've told me sooner. I wouldn't have touched her if I knew."

Red in the face, Sunny walked over and pulled Xante to his side. "I'm warning you. Touch her again, and I'll kill you."

Aaron put his hands up. “Okay, okay. I won’t touch her again. Plus, only you would like a workaholic like her.”

Sunny’s expression hardened. He did not like anyone talking bad about his woman.

Xante took off her glasses and pinched the bridge of her nose. “You should leave if there’s nothing else. I’ll drop by your office later,” she said to Aaron.

Aaron shrugged. “Okay, fine. I won’t bother you two anymore. I’ll call the boss now.”

“Don’t tell her anything about this, okay?” warned Xante.

Aaron simply gave her an 'okay' gesture. He understood why she would not want Corinne to find out since there was a high chance Corinne would be angry at Xante for taking away her stepbrother's innocence.

After Aaron went out, Xante put her glasses back on and glanced coldly at Sunny. "Are you done playing? You should head home to study if you are."

"I've already finished studying for the day!" said Sunny defensively.

"Then go do something else someone your age would do! You being here would only get in the way of me working!" said Xante with annoyance.

As upset as Sunny was at being chased out, he did tone down his spoiled-brat attitude.

"Fine, I won't bother you working. But promise me you'll keep your distance away from Aaron. He doesn't seem like a good guy to me."

Xante sat back down on her office chair and looked mockingly at him. "Why should I promise you something like that? Do you really think I'm your girlfriend?"

Sunny frowned and then blushed. "Well, aren't you? Don't worry. I'll take care of you!"

Xante burst out laughing. "I don't need you to take care of me. We had s*x, but so what? We're not living in the old times where a man had to take care of a woman forever just because they slept together."

Sunny turned even redder from both shame and anger. "I don't care. If you won't let me take care of you, then you take care of me. After all, it... It was my first time."

'Oy, I wouldn't have slept with him if I had known it was his first time,' thought Xante. She could feel a headache coming.

That day, after Aaron left the hotel, Sunny would not let Xante leave until she answered his question.

That was why she came up with the idea of teasing him to make him run away. What she did not expect was Sunny would really take off his clothes.

One thing then led to another, and they somehow ended up on the bed with her on top of him. The excitement of it all seemed to have awoken some strong desire in Sunny, and Xante found herself pinned to the bed with him taking charge on top.

Sunny became hooked after that one time. Xante could not shake him off no matter what she said or did.

Moments ago, he came to the office to find her with some made-up excuse, and before she knew it, he had pinned her to the floor-to-ceiling window which he then proceeded to bite her hard on the neck. She thought her veins were going to burst.

‘I would’ve been eaten up by this puppy if Aaron hadn’t come in at the nick of time,’ thought Xante. As for Sunny, he was a simple-minded boy. He was the type that would never change his course of action once he had his mind set on something or someone.

“Hey, I’m hungry. When do you get off for lunch? Let’s go out to eat.”

“I usually have my lunch here,” answered Xante lightly while flipping through some documents.

“Then what about me?” asked Sunny, visibly upset.

“You’re a big boy. I’m sure you can take care of your lunch yourselves,” Xante replied absent-mindedly.

Sunny glared at her vehemently. It was obvious from his pursed lips that he was not happy with the arrangement.

Xante raised her eyebrow and glanced at him. “Why are you still here? Do you need money? Is that it?” Sunny suddenly felt like Xante did care about him after all. Otherwise, she would not have offered him money.

“No. I have enough money. But you should have lunch with me.”

Xante frowned. “Sorry, but there’s no ‘should’ or ‘should not’ in my world. Only a kid will use the word ‘should’ to get others to do what they want.”

“I told you a million times, I’m not a kid!”

“Did I say you were?” Xante asked with a scoff.

Sunny crossed his arms and sat back down on the sofa angrily. ‘Ugh! How dare she treat me like that?’ he thought. As a matter of fact, Xante was the first woman to ever treat him like he was nothing.

Xante pushed up her gold-rimmed glasses and continued to focus on her task at hand. After finishing the paperwork, she was about to call for her secretary to take the documents away when she saw Sunny had fallen asleep on the sofa.

‘Should I call for the security to carry him out? But he’s the boss’ stepbrother, and she seems to have a soft spot for him... She might get angry at me if something happens to him,’ she thought while massaging her temples. The whole thing was giving her a headache.

In the end, she walked over with a blanket she kept for overnights at the office and laid it on him.

All of a sudden, Sunny snapped his eyes open. “I knew it! You do care about me!”

Xante was speechless. She had made sure to be as quiet as possible to not wake him up, but it was all in vain. Annoyed, she pulled the blanket over his face and walked out of the office.

Sunny threw off the blanket and got up to chase after her. Xante was giving instructions to her secretary at the doorway, and the secretary looked at Sunny curiously when he came out of Xante’s office.

This annoyed Xante to no end, so she walked off after she finished giving instructions. Unfortunately, Sunny still followed her.

Xante suddenly stopped walking and asked irritably, “Why are you following me?”

“I don’t know... I just know I want to be by your side.”

Xante's lips twitched. "Even a husband and wife need to give each other space. Mister Sunny, I hope you'll stop following me," she said mockingly.

Sunny started blushing madly. "Did... Did you just call us husband and wife? Umm... Okay, I'll let my family know, and then I'll bring you home to meet them. But I have to warn you, they'll probably only let me get married after I graduate from university.

Lucas, especially, wants me to focus on my study. But if you're in a hurry, we can go register our marriage first. I, Sunny Rivera, promise you I'll take care of you and stay loyal to you forever."

"Enough!" The more Xante listened to him, the more annoyed she felt. 'Does he think we're living in the old times? There's no law saying a man must marry a woman after he sleeps with her! Ugh. He's so foolish to the point that it's laughable.'

She never thought about marrying him nor did she want him to take responsibility for her.

"Mister Sunny, you seem to have mistaken me. I'm asking you to stop following me and leave me alone. If you have so much free time on your hands, you should study or do something else. Do you understand me now?"

Sunny scoffed. “The school’s having a winter break, and I’ve already finished all of my homework. I have all the time in the world to hang out with you.”

‘Is this kid stupid or something?’ Xante wondered.

“I don’t want to hang out!” she grumbled.

“I don’t believe you! You obviously care about me.

You wouldn’t have given me the blanket otherwise.”

Xante was speechless. She felt like she was talking to a wall. Thus, she ignored Sunny and went to Aaron’s office instead.

Annie was nowhere to be seen when Xante arrived outside of Aaron’s office, which she found to be very strange.

Before she went in, she said sternly to Sunny, “Wait outside! Don’t follow me in!”

“Why can’t I go in with you? Why are you looking for Aaron again?” he asked unhappily.

“If you haven’t noticed, this is a company, and I’m working! Aaron is my business partner and colleague. You, a non-employee, have no right to be there for our business discussion.”

Sunny scoffed haughtily. “Fine. I won’t bother you working. I’ll wait outside.”

Xante rolled her eyes at him before knocking on the door and entering Aaron’s office.

Sunny anxiously and obediently waited for her like a dog waiting for its owner to return. From time to time, he would put his ear against the door to hear what was going on inside.

“Sunny? Is that you?”

Hearing his name, Sunny turned and saw Annie with a cup of coffee in her hand.

“Hey, it is you, Sunny!” said Annie with surprise.

“What are you doing here?”

Sunny was surprised to see Annie there too. “I should ask you the same thing. What are you doing here?”

Annie sat back down in her seat. “I work here.”

Sunny’s eyes widened in shock. “What?! You work here? I thought you worked at your uncle’s company!”

“I did, but it was so boring there that I came to work here instead. Plus, this is a good chance for me to learn how to be independent.”

An idea suddenly popped into Sunny’s mind. “Are you guys still hiring? Can I work here?”

Annie looked suspiciously at him. “You want to work here? Why? Wouldn’t it be better to work in your family company?”

Sunny pouted. “It’s not going to be fun working there! My brother will watch me like a hawk, and he’ll say nothing I do is ever good enough. Also, I want to learn how to be independent like you too!”

Annie half-believed him. “I don’t think the company hires students who haven’t graduated from high school.”

Sunny frowned in embarrassment. “I’m graduating soon!”

“Well... The company doesn’t hire part-timers either.”

“Then how did you get the job?”

Annie rolled her eyes. “We’re not the same, okay? I’m a university graduate. Not to mention, I got the job through legitimate means. I applied with my resume and went for the interview.”

Sunny scoffed. “You think you’re so great just because you’ve graduated from a university.”

“Yeah, real mature of you,” said Annie sarcastically.

“Anyway, you haven’t told me why you’re here. Also, would you care to explain why you have your ear pressed against Mister Aaron’s office door?”

Sunny cleared his throat awkwardly. "Umm... I wasn't trying to eavesdrop or anything but...my... My girlfriend is inside, and I'm...worried about her."

"What?! You have a girlfriend?"

Sunny lifted his chin proudly. "Yeah. Why do you sound so surprised?"

Annie waved her hand and laughed. "I find that really hard to believe. I mean, what girl would be willing to date a kid like you?"

Hahahaha!"

Sunny's face darkened. "The only kid here is you!"

What Sunny and Annie did not know was that the soundproof effect of Aaron's door was not as good as they imagined.

Therefore, Aaron and Xante could hear everything they said outside.

Xante was sitting across from Aaron's work desk with her head throbbing.

"What's the matter, Xante? Why do you look so sad? Is the kid not to your liking?" teased Aaron.

Xante rolled her eyes at him. "Oh, shut up. What's so good about being followed by a kid all day?"

Aaron rested his chin on his hand. "Then you shouldn't have coitus with him in the first place."

Xante did a facepalm. "You're right. There's not a day I don't regret what I did in the hotel that day. Is there any way I can get rid of him?"

Aaron raised his eyebrow. "I can think of one, but what's the rush? It's very rare to find such a naive boy like him in this day and age, so why not have some fun with him first?"

"No, thanks! Quick, tell me how to get rid of him."

"It's simple. You'll only need to call Lucas to tell him his little brother is bothering you, and he'll send someone to take care of him."

Xante had thought about this idea too, but she was worried Lucas would punish Sunny if she did. After all, she was partly to blame for flirting with Sunny first.

Seeing her being silent, Aaron raised his eyebrow pointedly. "What? Are you worried Lucas is going to give Sunny a beating when he gets home?"

"The only way that kid will learn his lesson is if Lucas gives him a beating, so let's call him!" said Xante with a frown.

She then took out her phone and called Lucas' office number.

After she hung up the phone, Aaron tutted and said, "I can't believe you actually called him!"

Xante pushed up her gold-rimmed glasses and glanced at him in annoyance. "Who gave me the idea! Anyway, have you called the boss?"

Aaron's expression became serious at the mention of Corinne. "I did. But she didn't pick up."

"What?" Xante checked the time on her phone.

"That's impossible! She should be up by now."

Aaron was very worried too. "You try calling her.

There's a chance Mister Jeremy might've blocked my number from her phone."

Xante dialed Corinne's number, but it went to voicemail too.

The two of them exchanged glances with each other, both of them thinking, 'This can't be good.'

"She didn't reply to any of my messages either. This is very unlike her."

"Do you think Mister Jeremy found out we told the boss about his secret wife abroad, so he decided to keep her away from us?"

"There's a possibility. Should we go to the mansion to look for the boss?"

“But if Mister Jeremy is determined to keep her away from us, we won’t be able to even get close to the mansion.”

Meanwhile, outside Aaron’s office, Sunny and Annie were still bickering with each other.

“Hey Sunny, you said your girlfriend is in Mister Aaron’s office, right? What business does she have with him?” probed Annie.

She was wondering if Aaron would be so much of a jerk that he would seduce Sunny’s girlfriend too.

“I don’t know. She’s probably giving him some orders or something.”

“Giving him some orders?” repeated Annie with shock. “Who is she to order Mister Aaron?”

Sunny pointed proudly to Xante’s office, saying, “Her office is just over there, so she has every right to order Mister Aaron around.”

Annie nearly choked on the coffee she was drinking. “Cough, cough! Are you saying your girlfriend is Miss Xante?”

Sunny nodded. “That’s right.”

Annie’s jaw nearly dropped to the ground. ‘The two of them couldn’t be any more different, so how did they end up together?’

“Does that mean...you’re going to be the trophy husband in the future?” muttered Annie.

“Oh my god, Annie. You should get your brain checked,” said Sunny unhappily. “She’s going to marry into my family, not the other way round. If anything, she’s going to be the trophy wife.”

Annie took another sip of her coffee. “Is there a difference? But I must say, I’m impressed you’ve managed to snag Miss Xante.

After all, she’s a workaholic known to shun any advances from other men.”

Sunny’s eyes lit up. “Really? Is that really true?”

Annie nodded. “Yeah! There were a few good-looking project partners who tried to court Miss Xante, but she turned them all down in the end. They’d send her flowers and buy her bags, but she’d either return the gifts or throw them away. As a matter of fact, some of my colleagues were starting to wonder if she doesn’t like guys.”

Sunny was very happy to hear that. Frankly, he was a little bummed out by how he and Xante started. He kept wondering if Xante treated other men the same way she treated him, so when Annie told him Xante usually shunned other men, he immediately felt relieved.

‘So she’s not as wild as she makes herself out to be!’ he told himself.

At that moment, the elevator door dinged open, and Edmund walked out with two burly bodyguards.

Their target? Sunny Rivera.

“Wha... What are you doing here, Edmund?” cried Sunny with shock.

“Mister Lucas asked me to escort you home.”

“Lucas did? How does he know I’m here?” asked Sunny nervously.

“I told him,” said Xante indifferently as she walked out of Aaron’s office.

“You... You called my brother?” said Sunny in shock.

Xante pushed up her gold-rimmed glasses. “Yes. I wouldn’t have to do that if you had just gone home as I told you to.”

Sunny was hurt by the betrayal. “How dare you! I just wanted to have lunch with you, yet you snitched on me to my brother? You know I fear him the most! How could you...”

Xante felt a little guilty when she saw how hurt he was.

Edmund put a hand on Sunny, who tried to break free from the bodyguards. "Let's go home, Mister Sunny."

"No!" exploded Sunny. "I'm not going home! Let go of me!"

Edmund sighed helplessly. He then gestured for the two burly bodyguards to escort Sunny out. After that, he gave Xante a curt nod before following the three of them to the elevator.

Xante sighed with relief, but it was not even one second later when she frowned.

"Why the sad face? Does it hurt you to see him being hauled back like that?" asked Aaron, who was leaning casually against the doorway.

Xante turned around and glared at him. "P*ss off!" Aaron smiled and shrugged. He then looked at Annie, who was visibly in shock.

She was talking to Sunny for a moment, and the next, he was hauled off by a couple of men. Needing time to process what just happened, she sipped her coffee while blinking.

“That coffee must be really good for you to be in a daze,” teased Aaron.

His voice snapped Annie out of her shock. She quickly put her coffee down.

Aaron smiled at her. “Don’t worry. You’re allowed to have a little coffee break. But why didn’t you order one for me too?”

Annie got up to explain, “Umm... Actually, a colleague from another department bought this coffee, and... We didn’t get you one because we thought you wouldn’t like cheap drinks like this.”

Not wanting to throw her colleagues under the bus, she explained it in such a way that would not offend Aaron.

Aaron raised his eyebrow. “Oh, really? What makes you think I won’t drink cheap drinks? Give it to me. I want to have a taste!”

‘He wants to have a taste? But we didn’t even order one for him!’ Annie looked at him perplexedly.

Before she could react, Aaron picked up her coffee from the table and sipped.

“Hey, it’s not bad. Tell them to get me one next time.”

Annie’s eyes widened in surprise, and colors began creeping in on her cheek. She looked at him in confusion. ‘Did he really just drink from my cup?! Does that mean...we kissed? No, Annie, you’re overthinking things. The thought probably never crossed his mind since he changes girlfriends like he changes underwear. He’s probably used to having his way with women, so he didn’t drink the coffee because of me. In fact, he would’ve drank the coffee if it were anyone else other than me!’

Annie shook her head to clear her head of unrealistic thoughts. She then took back her coffee and threw it in the trash can.

“Okay, Mister Aaron. I’ll ask them to order you one in the future.”

Aaron narrowed his eyes and glanced at the coffee in the trash can. Suddenly he chuckled and said, “I didn’t know you disliked me so much. Sorry for ruining your coffee.”

Annie frowned and said coldly, “It’s okay. I normally don’t finish my coffee anyway.”

Aaron’s expression hardened. He was not used to being treated so coldly by Annie. After all, she used to be madly in love with him before. Then again, was this not what he wanted?

Xante walked over and reminded him, “Aaron, stop teasing the poor girl and get on with it.”

Aaron snapped out of his trance and said seriously, “Miss Annie, we need your help.”

Annie bowed slightly. “I’m always at your service, Mister Aaron.”

“Are you sure? ‘Cause this isn’t a work matter but a personal matter.”

Annie looked up curiously. “A personal matter? Do elaborate.”

‘He’s not going to ask me to buy condoms again, is he?’ she wondered.

Aaron put his arm around Xante’s shoulder. “We’d like to go to the Holdens’ mansion, but we’re worried they wouldn’t welcome us. So, we were hoping you’ll take us there. It should be easier for us to get in since you’re Jeremy’s niece.”

Annie was a little taken aback by his request. “But why do you want to go to Uncle Jeremy’s house, Mister Aaron? Did something happen?”

“We want to see how Corinne and the baby are doing and to pass her some supplements too,” replied Aaron.

“If that’s the case, you don’t need me to bring you, right? I mean, I’m sure the Holdens would welcome you if that’s all you wanted to do,” said Annie, confused.

Aaron raised his eyebrow. “It’s better if we bring you. What if they wouldn’t let us in? It’ll mean we went there for nothing.”

Annie thought the whole thing was rather weird, but what Aaron said made some sense as well. Thus, she nodded and said,

“Okay. Shall we leave after work?”

“No. We can leave right now if it’s okay with you.”

“Right now?” Annie blinked and checked the time on her phone. “Well, I am kind of free... Oh, alright. Let’s go then.”

Annie picked up her bag and shoved her phone inside. She then put on her coat and followed Aaron and Xante to the elevator.

On the way, Aaron saw from the corner of his eyes the same brand of coffee Annie was drinking moments before sitting on top of a male colleague's desk. He even saw Annie and the male colleague exchanging smiles. Not to mention, the male colleague was exactly the one who flirted with her before.

Once the driver drove the car around, Annie got in the front passenger seat while Xante and Aaron sat in the back seat.

Annie looked out of the window and she suddenly thought of something. She took her phone out from her bag and texted

Corinne, [Hey, I'm on the way to see you with Mister Aaron and Miss Xante. Is there anything you want me to get for you?]

She waited for a few minutes for Corinne to reply, but when she did not, she exited out of the app.

However, a few seconds later, she received a text from Marcus Bing, her colleague.

[Why did you go out with Mister Aaron and Miss Xante?]

[They asked me to help them with some personal matters.]

[Personal matters? I didn't know you're that close with them.]

[Not really. We just happen to have mutual friends.]

[I see. Doesn't this mean you won't have time for lunch? Is there anything to eat at the place you're going?]

Annie was pleasantly surprised. It had been so long since someone cared about her. Touched, she was about to reply when

Aaron said, "Miss Annie, you can text all you want, but you better not let anyone know where we're going."

Annie's fingers froze. She instinctively hid her phone from view before turning back to check whether Aaron was snooping in on her texts. She secretly sighed with relief when she saw he was settled comfortably in his seat.

"Don't worry, Mister Aaron. I only texted Corinne to ask her if I can get her anything," said Annie.

Aaron smiled. "That's fine, then."

Annie felt like Aaron seemed more threatening than usual, but she could not quite put her finger on why she felt like that.

She quickly shot off another text to Marcus. [Don't worry. I'll make sure to have my lunch. Catch you later.]

[Stay safe. Call me if you need anything.]

[Sure!]

After that, Annie checked one more time for Corinne's reply, but there was none. Thus, she put her phone back into her bag.

Aaron narrowed his eyes when he saw Annie acting suspiciously when she was replying to the messages. He then smiled mockingly and asked, "Someone has a little crush on Marcus, I see?"

'So he was snooping after all! How else would he know who I was texting?' thought Annie in shock.
