“What does that have to do with you, Mister Aaron? Even if I do have a crush on him, it’s not like you can set us up, right?”

Aaron smiled. “And what if I can? Give me two days to settle my stuff, and then I’ll set you two up on a date.”

Annie was speechless. She was only trying to get a rise out of him, so she did not expect he would actually agree to help her.

“No, thanks! I don’t need your help at all.”

Aaron raised his eyebrow. “Does that mean you’ll ask him out yourself?”

Annie frowned and turned back to look at him.

“Mister Aaron, while it’s true I failed to get you to agree to go on a date with me, that doesn’t mean other guys will not ask me out on a date first! I’m not as bad of a catch as you think I am!”

Aaron pursed his lips into a tight smile. “That’s true. I’m sure plenty of guys will find you very attractive.”

Annie chose not to continue the conversation. She used to think Aaron was kind and funny, but at that moment, she just found him mean.

‘Corinne is right. Mister Aaron isn’t husband material at all. No woman will be able to leave unscathed if they get into a relationship with him,’ thought Annie.

Not getting a reply from Annie, Aaron looked at Xante disinterestedly and realized she was staring at her phone intently. He moved a little closer to her to see who she was texting.

Xante stared at Sunny’s message speechlessly.

[You b*tch! You sold me out! I hate you!]

Xante did not reply to him, but that did not stop him from sending her another message.

[You dare to tell my brother I was harassing you when you flirted with me first?]

Xante pushed up her gold-rimmed glasses. No reply from her still.

Ten seconds later, another message from Sunny.

[I just received a beating from Lucas. Are you happy now?]

Xante frowned and her fingers hovered over the screen hesitantly before replying, [Where did he hit you?]

[Everywhere! This is all your fault, you evil woman!]

[Well, I hope you've learned your lesson. Stay away from me, and you won't get a beating next time.]

[As if! Don't think you're shaking me off that easily.

We slept together, so that makes us a couple! Mark my words: There will be a time when Lucas will be too busy to care about me, and then I'll go find you again. You better not fool around with another man

until then, or I'm going to bite you to death!]

Xante frowned. [Looks like you need more beating from your brother.]

[No amount of beating from him is going to keep me away from you! I didn't fight with my brother because

I didn't want to anger him since he's injured and all, but I, Sunny Rivera, will never bow to violence!]

Xante decided to not reply to him anymore. Talking to Sunny was like talking to a brick wall—pointless and headache-inducing.

After a few minutes, she received a subdued message from Sunny. [Xante... What are you doing right now? My brother has grounded me... Can we have a video call?]

Xante continued to ignore him. She was about to turn off her phone when she received a video call request from Sunny.

Before she could do anything, Aaron snatched the phone away from her and accepted the video call.

It was too late by the time Xante realized what Aaron was doing.

The video call went through, and Sunny's face peeked out unhappily from the screen.

He lifted his chin proudly and said, "I've decided to forgive you, Xante. I'm partly to blame for what happened today since I shouldn't have gone to your workplace to bother you. I promise I won't do it again and will only find you after you've clocked off work."

Aaron tutted. "Not bad, Mister Sunny. It didn't take you long to learn from your mistake."

Sunny immediately glared at the screen when he realized it was Aaron he was talking to. "You again! Why do you have Xante's phone?"

Before Aaron could say anything, Xante snatched her phone and said, "I'm hanging up now."

"Wait! Xante—" Sunny did not get far as Xante turned off her phone.

After that, she glared at Aaron. “What the heck is wrong with you?!”

Aaron shrugged. “I just want to see whether Mister Sunny is serious about you, and I got my answer. He might be sort of spoiled, but at least he’s willing to learn from his mistake. I think you should continue dating him.”

“As if!” Xante rolled her eyes at him before turning her face away and closing her eyes to take a short rest.

Aaron grinned cheekily but his face fell when he realized Annie was looking at him with disgust from the rearview mirror.

Finally, the trio arrived at the Holdens’ mansion. Annie got out of the car and was curious to find so many bodyguards stationed around the mansion. She rang the doorbell, and Bowen’s face immediately appeared on the monitor.

“Oh, hello, Miss Annie.”

“Hello, Bowen. I’ve come to see Corinne. Is she home?”

“She is... Though I must ask, did you come alone, Miss Annie?” asked Bowen cautiously.

“No. I came with two friends.”

“Uh... Who are they? Are they friends of Miss Corinne, too?”

Annie nodded. "Yeah. They're very good friends with Corinne. You can just let her know I've brought Mister Aaron and Miss Xante to visit her."

Bowen hesitated a little before replying, "Very well then, Miss Annie. Please wait for a moment."

The monitor turned dark after that.

'Bowen must've gone to ask Corinne for further instructions, but... Since when did the security here become so tight? I don't remember seeing this many bodyguards before,' thought Annie.

Xante and Aaron got out of the car too. They looked at each other when they saw the bodyguards around the mansion.

After a while, Bowen along with a few other servants came out with some sort of security tools on their hands.

"Hey Bowen, did Corinne give us the green light to go in?" asked Annie.

Bowen looked seriously at Xante and Aaron before saying, "Miss Annie, since we've never met your friends before, they'll need to go through a security check to ensure there are no dangerous items on them. Only then would they be allowed to see Miss Corinne."

Annie was stunned. 'They have to go through security checks?'

‘No wonder those tools look so familiar! They’re the same as those used in the airport for security screening! But...’

“Bowen, is this necessary? These people and Corinne go way back, so they’re not bad people,” said Annie.

“Miss Annie, we’re just doing our job. Mister Jeremy has left strict orders for us to perform security checks on everyone who visits Miss Corinne,” insisted Bowen.

“Fine,” said Annie with resignation. “Let me ask my friends to see if they can accept it.”

“Very well,” replied Bowen respectfully.

‘This is outrageous. I wonder if Mister Aaron and Miss Xante can accept this kind of treatment...’

Annie walked over to them and was about to explain when Aaron said, “It’s okay. We accept the security checks.”

“What? You’re not angry, Mister Aaron?” asked Annie in shock.

Aaron smiled. “Your uncle did this out of concern for Corinne, so what reason do we have not to accept it?”

“Phew! I’m so glad you think that. It didn’t used to be like this, you know. But Uncle Jeremy must’ve been really worried about Corinne getting hurt during her pregnancy to do this...” said Annie with some embarrassment.

After Annie gave Bowen the green light, Bowen asked the servants to perform a comprehensive security check on Aaron and Xante.

At the same time, the supplements they bought were declined.

“I’m sorry, Sir, but Mister Jeremy doesn’t allow Miss Corinne to eat anything that isn’t prepared in-house.

This is done out of consideration for her health so I’ll let her know you’ve bought her some gifts, but I’m afraid you won’t be able to give them to her,”

said Bowen.

Aaron smiled. “Understood. I must say, the level of detail Mister Jeremy has in taking care of his wife is really something.”

Bowen did not detect the sarcasm in Aaron's words, so after the security checks were done, he led them inside the mansion.

The living room was grand and bright, and apart from the servants standing by, there was no one else.

Bowen invited them to take a seat before saying respectfully, "Please wait here while I get Miss Corinne."

After that, he went upstairs to get Corinne. It was obvious he did not announce their arrival.

Five minutes later, Corinne walked tiredly down the stairs with a toddler in tow. She was dressed in loungewear, and her hair was tied up in a ponytail.

Corinne looked calm when she saw Aaron and Xante, but she did not meet their gaze.

Annie stood up and rushed excitedly over to her.

"Oh my god, Corinne! The security here is so strict.

In fact, it's even stricter than the airport's! We had to go through security checks before we were allowed in. They wouldn't even let us bring in the supplements we bought for you."

Corinne smiled tepidly. "You can thank your Uncle Jeremy for that."

Annie chuckled wryly. "I admit, he did go a little overboard. But it's all done out of consideration for you and the baby. He must be worried about you since he's not by your side."

Corinne smiled mockingly and said nothing. She sat on the sofa with Joey and looked absent-mindedly at Aaron and Xante.

"What are you two doing here?"

Aaron and Xante were relieved to find Corinne unhurt, but then again, they could not help but feel weirded out by the tension in the air.

Aaron saw the look in Corinne's eyes and knew what she was hinting at. Smiling, he said, "Why, Miss Corinne. We've come to visit you, of course."

"It's been so long since we met, so we thought we'd drop by," added Xante.

Both of them tacitly did not call her 'Boss'.

“Great. You’ve come just at the right time. I was feeling bored, but with you guys here, we can play some bridge to kill time.”

“Sure,” said Aaron with a smile.

“Yay! Mister Aaron gave me half-day off, so I can play with you guys too. I’ve always wanted to learn how to play bridge,” said Annie happily.

At that moment, Pamela came out of the kitchen with two maids.

“Corinne, I heard you have some friends over, so I made some snacks for them. Tell them to try it while it’s still hot!”

However, Corinne made no move to do so, which was weird since she had always been respectful of Pamela.

Annie quickly stood up and said, “Thank you, Ma’am. That’s very thoughtful of you.”

Pamela smiled kindly at her. “You’re Annie, right? It’s been so long since you last dropped by that I nearly don’t even recognize you anymore. My, my, you’ve certainly grown into a beautiful young lady.”

“You’re too kind, Ma’am,” said Annie, blushing.

Both Aaron and Xante got up to greet Pamela.

Since Pamela never met them before, she retained a little wariness when talking to them.

“You two must be Corinne’s friends. Sorry about the security checks, but Jeremy is really worried about Corinne getting hurt.

Please don’t take it personally,” she said politely.

Aaron smiled. “Don’t worry. It’s totally understandable.”

Xante said nothing.

Pamela gestured for the two maids to put down the snacks before sitting beside Corinne and Joey. Only then did Annie, Aaron, and Xante sit.

“Try the snacks. I hope they’re to your liking,” said Pamela politely. After that, she picked one of Corinne’s favorites and passed it to her. “Corinne, this is your favorite strawberry cookie. I’ve made extra for you.”

“Thanks, but no thanks. I appreciate the gesture, but I’m not in the mood to eat any sweet stuff at the moment,” said Corinne coldly.

Pamela’s hand paused. She did not get angry and passed the cookie to Joey instead. “Here, child. Try this cookie, and let me know whether it’s good or not.”

Being a kid, Joey could not resist any sweet stuff, so he quickly took the cookie and ate it. Corinne simply glanced at him and said nothing.

Since Pamela was there, Aaron and the rest of them found it awkward to talk about what they came for so they all fell silent.

In the past, Pamela had never been the one to insert herself into Corinne's friend group. She would go back to her room after serving some snacks so that Corinne and her friend could talk more comfortably.

However, since this was the first time Pamela met Aaron and Xante, she did not feel comfortable leaving Corinne alone with them. As much as she knew everyone was so quiet because of her, she did not plan to leave. “I overheard you kids say you want to play bridge? Well, that just happens to be my favorite card game! It’s such a shame I don’t get to play it as often as I like, so I hope you don’t mind letting me join,” said Pamela after sipping her tea.

Both Aaron and Xante were speechless while Corinne sat still expressionlessly.

Only Annie smiled and said, "Sure! You can team up with me since I don't know how to play bridge at all. I'll be more than happy to learn a thing or two from a veteran like you."

"No problem! I guarantee you'll be a pro by the end of the day. So, when shall we start?" asked Pamela. Everyone looked at each other.

Finally, Corinne said, "Let's play after lunch. It'd be rude to let my friends play on an empty stomach since they took the trouble to come all the way here."

Pamela could tell from Corinne's tone that she was not happy. She laughed to hide her embarrassment and then said, "You're right. Let's play after lunch. Don't worry, Corinne. I'll never let your friends go hungry."

"Is that so? I thought you Holdens are shameless enough to do anything."

Pamela's smile froze. Nonetheless, she got up, saying, "Well, I guess I should head to the kitchen, a treat as I'll personally cook for you. Stay here and chat for a while."

Annie got up too. "Ma'am, allow me to help you."

Pamela smiled and waved her hand. "There's no need, Annie. I'll get the servants to help me. You stay here and chat with Corinne."

After that, she went to the kitchen with the maids.

When she walked past Bowen, she gave him a pointed look.

Bowen immediately understood what she was hinting at. He nodded and went over to the living room to stand behind Corinne.

Pamela might be gone, but the situation was still the same as before. Aaron and the others did not find it comfortable to talk about what they really wanted with Bowen listening, so they made some small talk instead.

After thinking about it, Corinne suddenly whispered something to Joey, and the boy quickly got down from the sofa, picked up one of the tea cups, and ran off somewhere.

Turning around, she asked, "Bowen, can you please go make sure Joey doesn't trip and hurt himself? I'd do it myself, but it'd be rude to leave my friends. Plus, you wouldn't want anything bad to happen to Joey too, right? Think of what Mister Jeremy would do to the servants then."

Bowen was certainly put in a spot. He looked at Corinne and then at Joey, who was some distance away. One of the maids was already in pursuit, so after thinking about it, Bowen decided to stay in the living room.

"Ma'am, the maid will take care of Mister Joey. There's nothing to worry about."

Corinne's eyes dimmed. "So what you're saying is, eavesdropping on me and my friends is more important than Joey's safety?"

"No, Ma'am!" exclaimed Bowen embarrassedly. "I'm not eavesdropping on you or your friends. I'm just standing by here in case you have any orders for me. Also, it's important for me to make sure your friends have a pleasant visit."

Corinne smiled coldly. "If you're worried about my friends not having a pleasant visit, you wouldn't have made them go through the ridiculous security checks."

"We're just doing what Mister Jeremy asked us to do..."

Corinne waved her hand. "Fine, whatever. You don't have to explain it to me. I'm only going to ask you one last time: Are you or are you not going to help me look after Joey?"

“Please don’t get angry, Ma’am. I’ll go bring Mister Joey back right now,” said Bowen.

After that, he went to look for Joey.

“Annie, go and help Bowen. Joey can be a handful sometimes,” said Corinne.

“Sure thing, Corinne!” said Annie naively. She had zero clue Corinne was doing this to divert her away. Finally, only Corinne, Aaron, and Xante were left in the living room. They did not waste time in getting to the crux of the matter.

“Boss, what’s going on? Why didn’t you pick up or answer any of our messages?” Xante asked in a hushed tone.

“My phone has been tampered with. I can only call or receive calls from Jeremy. It wouldn’t work when I tried to call or message you guys.”

“What?! Isn’t this the same as being kept under house arrest?” scoffed Aaron.

A hint of anger flashed across Corinne’s eyes. “I’m guessing he knows I know about the other woman abroad and is afraid I’ll run away again. He’s doing all this to make sure the baby stays.”

“Holy sh*t! You don’t think he’s going to kick you out of the house after the baby is born, right?” Aaron asked in shock.

Xante kicked him lightly. "Shh! Don't be so loud and act normal. Don't forget where we are right now."

Aaron cleared his throat and sat up straighter.

"Ahem! So what do you plan to do, Boss?"

"You two find a way to get me out of there."

Aaron stroked his chin. "Judging by how wary Miss Pamela is of us, I don't think it'll be that easy."

Corinne obviously knew Pamela was on her precious grandson's side. That was why she made every move so that it would be impossible for Corinne to blatantly walk out of the house.

"I didn't say get me out today. Quick, one of you give me your phone so I at least have contact with the outside world."

Aaron nudged Xante with his elbow. "Xante, you do it. I need my phone."

Xante glanced coldly at him. "I need my phone too! You leave yours!"

Corinne frowned. "What's the hold-up? You two should be volunteering for me to use your phone!"

Xante would have given Corinne her phone if it were not for Sunny. She was afraid her boss would find out about their relationship after reading all the nonsensical messages Sunny sent her. She took out her phone and cleared all the chat history before handing her phone to Corinne.

Corinne quickly shoved the phone into a pocket. “Be nice to Miss Pamela later. She’ll let her guard down if you can make her happy.”

After that, she went to the kitchen to check on Pamela.

The kitchen was spacious and filled with natural sunlight. Even though Pamela said she would cook herself, the staff did not dare to let her do so. Thus, the old woman was relegated to the role of a supervisor.

All the servants bowed respectfully when they saw Corinne coming in.

Pamela was surprised to see Corinne in the kitchen. “Corinne, what are you doing here? Don’t you want to hang out with your friends? I’ll let you know when lunch is ready.”

Corinne smiled. “It’s okay. They’ll be fine by themselves. I came to see if you need any help.”

Pamela waved her hand. "No, it's alright. I have plenty of help here. You should get out of the kitchen. All this smoke and grease isn't good for the baby."

Corinne looked down and stroked her belly.

"Grandma, you really care about this baby, don't you?"

"Of course," replied Pamela sincerely. "How can I not care about my great-grandson?"

Corinne smiled tepidly. "Does that mean you won't care about me once the baby is born?"

Pamela was a little taken aback by the question.

She quickly held Corinne's hand and said, "Is everything alright? Why would you think like that?"

Corinne smiled wryly. "I can't help but think I'm just a birthing machine for the family. I have no freedom or say in my life anymore."

"But Corinne, we were good to you before you were pregnant too! It's just that we can't help but worry about the baby after what happened with Anya and everything. I want to be able to hold my great-grandson before I die, but never have I once thought you're just a birthing machine," explained Pamela patiently.

Corinne still looked down. “Still... I feel that you and Jeremy have changed...”

Pamela squeezed Corinne’s hand. “Well, it’s true that Jeremy has been busy these past weeks, but I promise I’ll make him spend time with you once he’s back.”

Corinne pulled back her hand. “Since you don’t need my help, I’ll go back to the living room, then.”

After that, she walked listlessly out of the kitchen. It pained Pamela to see Corinne like that, so she called out to her, “Corinne, wait!”

Corinne paused in her tracks and turned. “Yes, Grandma?”

Pamela got up and stroked Corinne’s face sadly. “The pregnancy hormones must be making you more sensitive than usual. But don’t worry, I can guarantee Jeremy loves you. I know you’re mad at him for keeping you under house arrest, but he only does that to make sure you’re safe... I have an idea. If the weather is good tomorrow, I’ll go out with you. The bodyguards will never dare to stop me. Let’s go wherever you want to go!”

“Do you really mean that, Grandma?” asked Corinne happily. She got what she wanted.

“Of course. When have I ever lied to you?” said Pamela seriously.

“Oh, thank you, thank you! Though, I haven’t thought of where I want to go yet. I really hate the feeling of having someone watching my every move... I’ll let you know where I want to go after I’ve made up my mind.”

“I understand. Jeremy can be very overbearing sometimes. I’ll give him a lecture once he’s back, so just enjoy hanging out with your friends, okay? I’ll let you know when the lunch is ready.”

Corinne nodded obediently, but the moment she turned around, she changed back to her cool and calm self.

As angry as she was about her freedom being taken away, she knew she could not count on anyone in the Holden family to help her. They were obviously of the same mind. Thus, she came up with the idea of using a softer approach to get Pamela to bring her out. That way, it would be easier for her to escape.

She had completely given up on Jeremy to the point she was willing to give up the position of Missus Holden to the woman abroad.

Xante was the only person in the living room by the time Corinne got back.

She sat next to her and asked, “Where’s Aaron?”

Xante pointed with her chin to outside, where it was viewable through the floor-to-ceiling window.

Corinne looked to where she pointed and saw Aaron and Annie playing with Joey on the lawn.

“I thought Aaron doesn’t like kids,” said Corinne with narrowed eyes.

Xante pushed up her gold-rimmed glasses. “He doesn’t. He’s just putting up an act.”

“Why would he do that?”

At that moment, Corinne saw Aaron reaching out to help Annie swipe off some leaves that had fallen on her hair.

Annie instinctively stepped back, though she did thank him. After that, she focused her attention on Joey only.

“Aaron is still chasing after Annie?” Corinne asked with a frown.

“My guess is he can’t help but chase after her. He’s in way too deep than we thought,” replied Xante wisely.

“What do you mean?”

“We watched him grow up, so we know just how much of a player he is. He’s never been before. Similarly, no girl has ever been serious about him since they all heard of his reputation.

“The saying ‘like attracts like’ is very apt to him. I mean, no decent girl would touch him with a three-meter pole. No decent girl except for Annie. She’s kind, honest, and naive. I think he started falling for her after she kept bringing home-cooked meals for him every day. After all, no girl has ever treated him with respect or chased him like she did. In fact, I think he would’ve asked Annie to be his girlfriend if you hadn’t stopped him.”

“As if! So what if he asked Annie to be his girlfriend? Does he have any intention to marry her?” asked Corinne with somewhat conflicted feelings.

“Of course not,” Xante said without hesitation. “You know very well he’s a non-marriage advocate.”

“Well then, it’s good that I stopped him because Annie has plans of getting married one day,” said Corinne. After what happened, she started to hold more negative views toward relationship matters. “Annie was deeply hurt by her dirtbag ex-fiance, and she’s the type to want to get married after dating. She can’t afford to get hurt the second time anymore. That’s why I stopped Aaron from getting close to her.”

Xante nodded thoughtfully. “The kind of breakups that hurt the most is when you’re left at the altar without any explanation. In fact, it would forever color all the relationships after it.”

‘She’s right. No matter how strong a woman is, there’s still no guarantee she won’t get hurt in matters of love,’ thought Corinne.

At the Holdens’ mansion compound, Aaron was holding Joey high up in the air. At first, Joey was frightened as it was his first time meeting Aaron, but after a while, he relaxed and found the whole thing fun.

Annie looked at Aaron, who looked so gentle and happy playing with Joey under the bright sunlight. A sense of warm and fuzzy feelings rushed over her.

“I didn’t know you like kids so much, Mister Aaron,” said Annie.

“What makes you think I like kids?” Aaron asked while pulling Joey back into his arms.
