Chapter 1151

Pamela's heart ached as she looked at Corinne. 'She looks healthy, but why isn't she as energetic as before?'

Corinne turned to leave after she said what she had come to say. Her goal was to make Pamela feel guilty so that the old lady would let her guard down. She vowed to escape from the Holdens, who changed her life's trajectory, no matter what tomorrow.

After coming out of Pamela's room, Corinne saw Francine and Joey playing in the yard with Chester watching from the side.

After thinking about it, she went out to join them.

Joey immediately toddled over to Corinne when he saw her walking toward them. "Auntie Sissy..."

Francine followed after him, shouting playfully, "You little ungrateful brat! I spent the whole day playing with you, yet you dumped me the moment you saw your Auntie Sissy?"

Joey giggled at Francine while keeping his chubby arms wrapped around Corinne's legs. It was obvious who he preferred.

Corinne ruffled his hair and said, "Go play with Aunt Francine. I'll be watching you from over here."

Joey nodded obediently before pulling Francine to play at another side. Francine led him on her lap. Together, they swung slowly.

Corinne was relieved to see Francine being so patient with Joey. That way, even if she left the next day, Joey would still have Francine to take care of him.

Chester walked over to greet her. "Hey, Corinne."

Corinne turned to smile politely at him. "You're here early."

"I have no class on Saturday, so I thought I'd come early to tutor Francine."

"Oh. Thanks for your hard work."

Chester looked worriedly at Corinne when he heard the apathy in her voice. "Corinne, are you really happy here?"

Corinne raised her eyebrow. "Don't I look happy to you?"

Chester frowned and looked at her closely. "You seemed happy a while ago, but I can't help but feel you're not happy at all now."

Corinne smiled. "You're right. I've been feeling down recently."

“Those bodyguards outside are there to keep an eye on you, aren’t they?” asked Chester angrily. “Francine’s brother doesn’t look like a good husband at all!”

Corinne did not bother to explain to him what was going on. After a moment of silence, she looked at Francine and Joey before saying meaningfully, “Chester, if one day I’m not here anymore, please make sure Francine treats that kid well.

He really didn’t have the best time growing up.”

“If you’re not here anymore?” repeated Chester in shock.

Corinne did not plan to reveal anything more than that, so it was a good thing Francine suddenly called out to him,

“Hey, Chester! Can you come over here to push us?”

Chester was still waiting for Corinne to give him an explanation, but she just gestured with her chin. “Go. She’s calling you.”

Knowing Corinne was not going to say anything more, Chester sighed and went over to Francine.

Corinne was not at all worried Chester would say anything to Francine because she knew he was a guy who knew when to keep things to himself. The reason she said what she said to him was because she knew Francine would only listen to him.

If Chester told Francine to take good care of Joey, she would take that as her life mission.

Corinne looked around the yard. ‘This will be my last time standing here.’

The only person she could not really let go was Joey.

Soon, night came. After dinner, Corinne took her shower and was about to read a bedtime story to Joey when her phone rang.

She picked up her phone and saw Jeremy’s name on the screen.

‘What’s up with him? Why is he calling me every day now?’ she wondered.

As much as she did not want to talk to him, Corinne forced herself to answer the phone as she did not want to make Jeremy suspicious.

“Have you slept?” asked Jeremy softly. It sounded like he had already moved on from what happened last night.

“What do you think? Would I have answered your phone if I was sleeping?” asked Corinne monotonously.

“I asked because I was afraid I’d woken you up,” said Jeremy darkly.

“If you’re really afraid of waking me up, you wouldn’t have called at this hour!” said Corinne, hitting the nail on the head.

After a few seconds of silence, Jeremy said softly again, “I was busy, and this is the only hour I can call you. How was your day?

Did you eat properly?”

Corinne felt a little disgusted by his concern. She would rather not hear it, so she pressed the phone on Joey’s ear instead, saying, “Your daddy misses you, Joey. Why don’t you talk to him for a while?”

“Dada!” shouted Joey happily.

Jeremy was speechless.

“Hello? Dada? Hello? Hello...” repeated Joey when he did not receive a reply from Jeremy.

Jeremy sighed. “Hello, Joey.”

Joey giggled happily. “Dada, come back. Joey misses Dada.”

“Soon, Joey, soon. You need to be a good boy while I’m not there, you hear?”

“Yes, Dada!”

“What is your mommy doing?”

Joey was stunned. Then he looked down sadly. “No Mama... No...”

He thought Jeremy was talking about Anya, but Joey did not want to see her as his mother since she would always scold and hit him.

Jeremy rubbed the bridge of his nose. “What is your sissy doing?”

Joey looked at Corinne with shiny eyes. “Auntie Sissy lying next to Joey! She good. Joey likes Auntie Sissy!”

The call was not on speakerphone, so Corinne could only hear Joey’s end of the conversation.

She was a little tired holding up the phone for him, so she impatiently took back the phone and said, “Mister, is there anything else? If not, I’m going to put Joey to bed now.”

“Thanks for doing this, little rascal. I know it’s hard to take care of a child unrelated to you while pregnant,” said Jeremy apologetically.

Corinne scoffed. “If you really think that, you’d be here to take care of yourself now. All you know how to do is pay me lip service!”

After that, she hung up the phone.

‘Ugh! He’s so annoying,’ thought Corinne. She threw her phone aside, laid down beside Joey, and sang him a lullaby to lull Joey to sleep and also to calm herself.

The next morning, they had breakfast earlier than usual since Pamela woke up before dawn to supervise the kitchen staff in breakfast preparation.

After breakfast, Pamela, Corinne, Francine, and Joey got ready to go to Central Park for a stroll and to feed the pigeons. The bodyguards were about to stop them, but Pamela simply glared at them until they backed down. Later, the bodyguards reported the situation to their supervisor.

With Pamela in charge, the group was able to drive out of the mansion without a hitch.

In the car, Pamela patted Corinne’s hand gently.

“Corinne, I’ve asked the servants to bring along some sandwiches and other food. You and Joey can eat in the car if you’re hungry later.”

Corinne smiled. “Thanks, Grandma. You didn’t need to do that since we could just eat in the restaurant.”

Pamela shook her head. “No, that simply won’t do! You’re pregnant, so it’s best not to eat outside food. Who knows whether the ingredients they use are fresh or not? Also, most of their food is just hyped up by influencers, so it’s best to eat food from home.”

Francine, who was carrying Joey in her lap, laughed out loud. “Hahaha! Grandma, I didn’t know you knew what hype up and influencers mean.”

Pamela scoffed. “Of course I know! Even a boomer like me knows how to use the Internet.”

Corinne laughed too, but her laugh sounded hollow.

30 minutes later, the car stopped at Central Park. Since it was early in the morning, there were not many people except for a few joggers. However, there were plenty of pigeons.

Corinne took the chance to secretly look around while Pamela was occupied with counting the pigeons with Joey. Just as she expected, the bodyguards followed them there. Some of them were keeping watch in their cars, which were parked some distance away from them, while others pretended to be joggers.

After thinking about it, Corinne said, “Grandma, wait here while I go buy some bread for the pigeon with Joey and Francine.”

Pamela nodded. “Alright. Be careful. Francine, take care of Corinne, okay?”

“Yes, Grandma. You know this must be the hundred times you told me that today, right?” said Francine, Pamela rolled her eyes at her. “Well, I wouldn’t have to do that if you weren’t so forgetful. Now, shoo! Go with Corinne to buy some bread.”

Francine, who was carrying Joey, followed Corinne to a little food cart that sold pastries and bread. One bread roll cost two dollars, and a dozen for 10 dollars.

Corinne asked for a dozen bread rolls and was about to pay with her digital wallet when someone suddenly snatched her phone away and ran off.

The thief cut through the ground when a flock of pigeons was milling about, causing them to fly up into the air, and disturbing the people around them.

“Thief! Thief! That thief has stolen my phone!” shouted Corinne in a panic.

The bodyguards immediately rushed over to her. “Ma’am. Are you alright?”

“Quick! Get me my phone back!” she ordered anxiously.

“That phone has private information about Jeremy. You must get it back!”

Most of the bodyguards chased after the thief, and one stayed behind to guard Corinne.

Joey started crying out of shock. Francine was panicking as well. “Corinne, are you okay?”

Corinne nodded. “Yeah, I’m okay. You should go comfort Grandma. She must’ve had a fright.”

“Okay, sure.” Francine immediately went over to Pamela with Joey in her arms.

Corinne watched as Francine and Joey left. A minute later, she raised her head and said to the bodyguard standing next to her,

“Help me to the fountain. I want to sit for a while.”

“Yes, Ma’am. Please be careful. Baby steps now.” The bodyguard carefully helped Corinne to the fountain. “Is here okay for you, Ma’am?” he asked once they got to the fountain.

“Yup,” Corinne replied with a nod. She pretended to sit down, but then she suddenly pushed the bodyguard into the fountain.

She had already escaped quite a distance away by the time the bodyguard got out of the fountain. He immediately shouted, “Quick! Chase after her! Miss Corinne has escaped!”

The bodyguards who were standing by the car quickly chased after her.

However, all of a sudden, a few women dressed the same as Corinne appeared in the crowd. It was all very chaotic since the bodyguards could not tell which was Corinne. Thus, they had no choice but to split up and approach every suspect.

“Hey, you! Stop there.” The lead bodyguard saw someone dressed like Corinne enter a black minivan, so he quickly summoned his subordinates to block the minivan.

The minivan stopped in front of them. A second later, the driver honked once, rolled down the window, and poked his head out.

“What do you guys think you’re doing?”

The lead bodyguard walked up to the window and said forcefully, “Please let Miss Corinne out of the car.”

“Miss Corinne? Who the heck is that? There’s no Miss Corinne in my boss’ car!” shouted the driver angrily.

“I saw her getting into your car. Don’t blame me for doing something drastic if you don’t let her out,” threatened the lead bodyguard.

The driver was furious. “Do something drastic? You’re gonna do something drastic when you’re the one who stopped me for no reason? Are you from the mafia or something?”

At that moment, the back seat window slowly rolled down to reveal Aaron’s smiling face. “Actually, I’m quite interested to know just what kind of drastic measure you’ll take.”

The lead bodyguard recognized Aaron to be Corinne’s friend, so he toned down his thuggish behavior.

“Mister Aaron, I know you’re a friend of Miss Corinne, but that doesn’t give you the right to take her away. Please let her out.”

Aaron raised his eyebrow. “What are you talking about? I don’t even know she’s here. Otherwise, I would’ve said hi to her.”

“Mister Aaron, we all saw her getting into your car just now.”

“Well, you must’ve seen wrong, ’cause she’s really not in my car.”

The lead bodyguard was not convinced. “Then you won’t mind us checking the inside of your car, right?” he asked with a frown.

Aaron chuckled coldly. “I do mind since I don’t want your grubby hands dirtying it.”

The lead bodyguard was not going to back down so easily. “I know we don’t have a right to check your car, but we won’t move an inch unless you let us check your car or let Miss Corinne out.”

Aaron narrowed his eyes. “How are you going to make it up to me if I let you check my car and Corinne isn’t inside?”

The lead bodyguard was sure Corinne was inside the car, so he confidently answered, “If Miss Corinne isn’t in the car, all of us will apologize to you.”

“Very well, then. You may check the car!” said Aaron with a scoff.

The lead bodyguard and his subordinates opened all the doors and looked inside, only to see a young woman who was dressed the same as Corinne sitting next to Aaron.

The lead bodyguard immediately recognized the young woman to be Xante. ‘So it wasn’t Miss Corinne after all... But why would

Miss Xante wear the same clothes as Miss Corinne? Something is definitely fishy about the whole thing.’

After thinking about it, he said, “Mister Aaron, can you please get your driver to open the boot for me to check?” Aaron gestured with his chin, and the driver in front quickly opened the boot. The bodyguards checked every corner of the boot, but nothing else was in there apart from a set of golf clubs.

“Are you done checking?” asked Aaron impatiently. “I’ve already told you Corinne isn’t with us.”

Frowning, the lead bodyguards walked up to him and said, “Mister Aaron, please tell us where Miss Corinne is!”

Aaron laughed. “My, you sure are funny. You stopped my car because you suspected Corinne to be inside. I even agreed to let you check the car! Now you’re asking me to tell you when she is after failing to find her in my car? How the heck would I know where she is?”

The lead bodyguard glanced at Xante. “Then why is Miss Xante wearing the same clothes as Miss Corinne? You can’t possibly ask us to believe it was a coincidence that Miss Xante appeared at the same place and same clothes as Miss Corinne.”

Aaron glanced disinterestedly at Xante’s clothes before breaking out in laughter. “Well, they have the same taste in clothing, so it's not that weird to see them wearing the same thing sometimes.”

“Then can you explain what Miss Xante is doing here at this time?” asked the lead bodyguard with a hardened expression.

Aaron laughed as though he had just heard the funniest joke in the world. “You make it sound like we're trespassing when we're in Central Park, a public place, for god's sake. There's a famous breakfast place over there that we like to go to at least once a week. After breakfast, we decided to take a stroll. You can't tell me there's something wrong with that, right?”

The lead bodyguard was speechless.

Aaron beckoned for him to come closer. “If you don't believe me, you can smell my clothes to see if it smells like a cafe.”

This time, all of the bodyguards were speechless.

Seeing this, Aaron's expression turned cold. “I've already done my part to let you check my car, so don't blame me for calling the cops if you all don't move your *ss right now!”

The lead bodyguard hesitated for a while before gesturing for his subordinates to step aside with resignation.

Aaron shut his car door and ordered the driver to drive away.

The bodyguards watched helplessly as Aaron's minivan drove away, and they started to panic.

“What should we do now? How are we going to tell Mister Jeremy that we've lost Miss Corinne?”

“Sh*t! He's definitely going to punish us for that!”

“We're done for...”

“That's enough!” shouted the lead bodyguard through gritted teeth. “Instead of sh*tting your pants over here, you all should be tailing Mister Aaron. He definitely has something to do with Miss Corinne's escape. It can't be a coincidence for them to be here.

We might be able to find Miss Corinne if we follow them!”

“Yes, Sir!”

Meanwhile, on the other side of the park, where there were no surveillance cameras along the street devoid of people, was a parked white Bugatti.

Corinne half-jogged over to the car, got into it, and took off her wig. She had changed into the clothes left by Xante in one of the public restrooms to escape notice from the bodyguards. “You look good in your disguise,” said Jason with a smirk.

Corinne was tired from the journey, so she was in no mood to joke around with him. “Cut the chit-chat and drive now.”

Jason smiled, started the car engine, and drove her away from the park. Not long after that, he turned the car into a residential area.

Seeing this, Corinne frowned and said, “Where are you taking me? I thought we were going to the airport?”

“Going to the airport now is as good as turning yourself in,” explained Jason. “The moment Jeremy knows you’ve escaped, he’ll arrange for his men to keep a close eye on you at every major airport and train station. Heck, it won’t even surprise me if he puts some eyes over the highway too.”

After thinking about it, Corinne found his explanation logical. However, she was not really convinced Jeremy would go through all that effort to find her.

“So where are you taking me, then?”

“Have you ever heard of the saying ‘hiding in plain sight’? That’s exactly what we’re for a couple of days, and when things die down, I’ll arrange for a private jet to fly you out.”

Corinne was a little taken aback, but she nodded after a while. “Thanks, Jason. But is this really where you live?” She looked out at the average-looking buildings. No matter how she looked at them, they did not look like somewhere a rich guy like Jason would live.

Jason smiled. “Yeah, I live here. Why? You don’t like it? I know it’s not as nice as Jeremy’s mansion, but it’s still home.”

Corinne shook her head and leaned back lazily on her seat. “No. It’s not that. I’ve lived in places far worse than this when I was little. It’s just... This doesn’t look like a place that a rich guy like you will live in. I mean, guys with daddy’s money always live in a mansion or penthouse, don’t they?”

Jason laughed. “Well, I used to live here when I was little. It’s been a long time since I came here. I don’t think it’s wise for you to live in a flashy place when you’ve just escaped from the Holdens, so that’s why I brought you here.”

“I see,” she said, even though she still found it weird that Jason would live in such a humble place when he was little. ‘Does that mean he didn't grow up rich?" she wondered. As curious as she was, she thought it would be rude for her to pry into his personal life.

They stopped in front of a shabby-looking flat since there was no underground parking. Together, they walked up to the second floor, and Jason took out a key to open the door.

"Welcome to my humble abode," said Jason.

Corinne was pleasantly surprised when she entered the living room. Even though the building looked shabby and old from the outside, the inside of Jason's unit was clean and tastefully decorated. It did not look like anyone was living there at all.

“Have a seat while I get you something to drink,” said Jason before going to the kitchen.

Corinne sat on the sofa and surveyed her new surroundings quietly when a glass of milk suddenly appeared in front of her.

“I hope you don’t mind giving you milk instead of a soft drink since you’re pregnant,” said Jason with a wide grin. “Thank you,” said Corinne with a polite smile after accepting the glass of milk.

Jason sipped his can of Cola and sat on the armchair next to the sofa.

Corinne gazed at the glass of milk intently while swirling it slowly.

Jason did not know whether to laugh or cry when he saw her doing that. “Are you afraid that I’ve spiked the milk with something?”

Corinne looked up at him. “Nope. I was checking to see if the milk has gone bad since you said you rarely come here. God knows how long this thing has been in your fridge.”

Jason laughed throatily. “I went to the supermarket yesterday to get it for you. All the things in the fridge are freshly bought, so you can eat them without worry.”

Corinne only drank the milk after making sure there was no weird smell or blobs in it.

Jason rested her chin in his hand and looked at Corinne playfully. “Are you really going to leave Jeremy this time?”

The milk instantly turned sour inside Corinne’s mouth the moment she heard Jeremy’s name. “Of course. Do you think I’m doing all this for fun?”

Jason narrowed his eyes. “If you don’t mind, can you tell me the reason?”

Corinne did not really want to tell him, but she owed him for helping her so she gave him the short version of the story. “He lied to me and played with my feelings.”

“Just because of that?” asked Jason with a raised eyebrow.

Corinne frowned. “Isn’t that serious enough? What’s the point of staying together if there’s no trust between us anymore?”

Jason sighed. “This isn’t a fairytale world we’re living in. We adults need to compromise a little when it comes to matters of love.

There’s no such thing as pure love.”

Corinne did not refute his reasoning, but she still could not accept it. “Fine. Let’s just chalk it down as me being naive. I guess I should just stay away from relationships from now on.”

“Oh no. Please don’t do that. There are still nice guys in the world. You’re even talking to one right now!” said Jason with a smile while pointing at himself.

Corinne rolled her eyes at him. “Says the guy who claims there’s no such thing as pure love. Don’t tell me you expect me to believe you're a guy who'll stay loyal till the very end, do you?"

Jason sat up a little straighter. "I don't expect you to believe that. But, what I can promise you is I'll never lie to you or pretend to be someone I'm not. Corinne, you should know how I feel about you, right? Why don't you give me a chance now that you've decided to leave Jeremy?"

Corinne looked at him suspiciously. "Are you being serious, Jason?"

Jason nodded. "Do I look like I'm not?"

Corinne chuckled coldly. "Don't forget I'm carrying Jeremy's baby inside of me. I might have decided to leave him, but that doesn't mean I'm going to get rid of the baby. Can you accept a woman who's carrying another man's baby?"

"Yup, I can. But, you have to give me a baby in the future too," said Jason without hesitation.

Corinne was speechless.

Corinne never met a guy as crazy as Jason!

She looked at him with disapproval and said, “You can forget about the whole thing. I don’t plan to have a second child, nor do I plan to find a stepfather for my kid.”

Jason pretended to be hurt. “But Corinne, I took a big risk to help you escape from the Holdens. Also, you promised to date me for a month in return for helping you.”

“Don’t worry, I haven’t forgotten my promise. But, dating and marriage are different things, so you better give up the idea of us going any further than a date. I’m already too tired to give marriage another try.”

Jason gazed deeply into her eyes before reaching out to touch her, but his hand froze when he saw Corinne shrink back. He put down his hand and smiled to hide his embarrassment.

“Don’t worry. I know you’re still feeling hurt over what Jeremy did to you, so I’m willing to give you some time. I trust that one day, you’ll accept my feelings for you.”

At that moment, Corinne was not in a headspace to think about all that stuff. “Thank you for your help today. I’ll take your advice to stay here for a few days. You can go back to work now.”

Jason smiled forlornly. “Corinne, you really know how to kick a person away after using them.”

Corinne chuckled wryly and said, “Oh, I’m not done using you at all.”

Jason was speechless.

“By the way, don’t tell Lucas about this,” added Corinne as an afterthought.

Jason nodded solemnly. “I know. But he’ll definitely be worried about you.”

Corinne fell silent for a few seconds before saying, “I don’t care whether he’s worried or not. The less people know that I’m here, the better my chances of escaping from this city.”

Jason gave her an ‘OK’ sign before Corinne unceremoniously pushed him out of the door. even shut for one second before he heard the sign of the lock turning from the inside.

He was speechless. ‘Wow, she’s really treating the place as her own home, huh.’

Corinne was not trying to be rude or anything, but she knew Jason would incessantly flirt with her if she did not chase him out of the apartment. Besides, it would be inappropriate for a man and a woman who were not dating or married to each other to be alone in a room.

After Jason left, Corinne sat back down on the sofa. Only then did she let the relief wash over her. However, she could not help but feel an indescribable emptiness filling her heart.

‘Jeremy must’ve heard about my escape by now,’ she thought.

Meanwhile, back at the Holdens’ mansion.

Greg was watering his prized orchid when he heard a commotion coming from outside.

Not a minute later, a bodyguard wheeled Pamela in in a wheelchair. Francine, who was carrying Joey, anxiously followed from behind.

Seeing this, the servants quickly went to take care of them.

Greg frowned. “What’s going on? You were fine when you went out this morning, so how did you end up in a wheelchair like me?”

Francine handed Joey, who had tired himself out from crying, over to the maid. After that, she walked up to Greg to explain, “Grandpa, Corinne went missing and Grandma fainted out of shock. But don’t worry. We sent her to the hospital right after, and the doctor said she’ll be fine after some rest.”

Greg’s eyes widened in anger. “What? Corinne is missing? How is that even possible? How could a grown woman like her go missing?”

Francine shook her head helplessly. “I don’t know either...but it seems like Corinne planned her escape.”

“Escape? Why would she want to run away? Did we mistreat her?”

“I think she’s mad ’cause Jeremy kept her under house arrest...”

Greg frowned. “Just because of that? Who does she think she is? I forbid anyone to go look for her. Let’s see how long she can survive on her own outside.”

Pamela, who was clutching her chest weakly, sat up a little straighter when she heard what Greg said. “You old fool! What the heck are you talking about? Don’t you know Corinne doesn’t need us? She’ll never come back if we don’t look for her.”

Even though Greg looked a little worried, he stubbornly insisted on his standpoint. “Hmph! She can stay missing for all I care!”

Pamela was so worried that she could feel her heart thumping quickly and loudly. Tears started to flow down her cheek. “Have you forgotten she’s pregnant? What if something bad happens to her and the baby?” she said with a sigh.

Greg could not bear to see Pamela so sad, so he waved his hand to “Bring the old lady back to her room, and arrange for more people to look for Corinne.”

“Yes, Mister Greg,” said the servants.

Thus, Pamela was wheeled back to her room to rest.

Joey would not stop crying no matter what the maid did to distract him. Francine was worried his cries would annoy

Greg, so she asked the maid to bring him to her room.

Only then did the living room turn quiet.

Greg looked out of the window anxiously. It would be a lie if he said he was not worried about Corinne.

“Grandpa, should we report this to the cops? We might be able to find Corinne faster with their help,” suggested Francine.

Greg glanced at her. “We can only report a person missing if they’ve been gone for at least seventy-two hours, so it’ll be pointless to go to the station now.”

Francine pouted. “Then what should we do? Jeremy must be worried sick about her now.”

Greg raised his eyebrow. “What? He knows about this already? Why did you tell him so fast? Doing this will only make him fly back.”

Francine shook her head innocently. “I wasn’t the one who told him. It was those bodyguards out there. They’re working under him, so of course they’d report Corinne missing the moment it happened.”

Greg’s frown became even deeper. He put his hand to his forehead and said, “Fine. Go up to their room now to see if there’s any clue to where she might be going.”

“Okay, Grandpa,” said Francine with a nod. After that, she half-ran upstairs.

The couple’s room was not locked, so Francine had no problem going inside. She looked around the room carefully but found nothing suspicious. That was until she heard the sound of a phone ringing.

Following the sound, she found Corinne’s phone, and the caller ID showed it was Jeremy calling her. ‘Why wouldn’t she bring her phone with her?’ wondered Francine.

Without hesitation, Francine answered the call.

Jeremy’s anxious voice immediately came through.

“Where did you go?”

“Jeremy, it’s me. Francine.”

After a pause, Jeremy asked, “Have you found her?”
“No. Not yet,” said Francine regretfully. “But don’t worry. I’m sure—”

“Ask my men to continue looking for her. I’ll catch the first flight back home!” interrupted Jeremy sternly.

After that, he hung up the phone.

Francine sighed helplessly. She then went through everything in Corinne’s phone, but she found not a clue.

‘What the heck is Corinne thinking? Does this mean she’s really determined to break up with Jeremy?’

Meanwhile, at Holden Group’s branch office in Molomia.

Jeremy quickly strode out of his office after picking up his suit jacket. As soon as he pushed open the door, he bumped into a woman who was just about to knock on the door.

“Jeremy, where are you going?” asked the scantily-clad woman.

“I’m going back home to attend to some urgent matter,” said Jeremy without stopping.

The woman was stunned. She quickly followed him to the elevator. “Jeremy, didn’t you fly back a few days ago?

What’s so urgent that you need to go back again? Also, all the hard work you put in will be in vain if you go back now!”

“I couldn’t care less about that right now,” replied Jeremy.

The woman had never seen Jeremy so panic-stricken before. After thinking about it, she asked cautiously, “Does this have something to do with Miss Corinne?”

Jeremy did not answer her. He stepped into the elevator the moment the door opened.

The woman chased after him. “Jeremy, let me go back with you this time!”

Jeremy looked at her with hesitation before nodding lightly.

Sophia did not go home to pack her luggage. After getting into Jeremy’s car, she called home and instructed the servant to send her stuff over to the destination.

While all this happened, Corinne was eating some noodles. Even though she had no appetite, she forced herself to eat something for the sake of the baby.

To his credit, Jason was quite thoughtful. He stocked the fridge full of food and drinks. He even wrote a note detailing how to use the stove, crock pot, and electric griddle and stuck it on the fridge door.

It was a good thing he wrote the memo, or Corinne would have a hard time figuring out how to use the slightly antiquated stove in the apartment. Of course, she did wonder how a spoiled young man like Jason would know his way around the kitchen. It was very perplexing, to say the least.

After she finished her noodles, Corinne went to lie down on the bed. She received a text message from Jason the moment her head hit the pillow.

[Feel free to use the tablet to watch a movie or play a game after you've eaten. The IP address is registered under the cleaner that comes once a week to clean the house, so you don't have to worry about Jeremy finding out you're here.]

Corinne was a little taken aback by the text message. She looked around the room carefully but found nothing suspicious.

[Are you spying on me through some hidden camera?]

[Of course not! Even I won't do something so low. Plus, I'm not as controlling or possessive as Jeremy.]

Corinne simply replied to him with a smiley emoji.

Looking at the emoji, Jason could just imagine Corinne smiling a smile that did not reach her eyes.
