Chapter 1161

“You look happy. Who are you texting?” asked Lucas while holding a coffee cup after glancing at Jason. They were both in his office.

“No one. I mean, it was one of my employees. He had some questions about work,” said Jason before he quickly put away his phone.

Lucas glanced at him again. “I’m surprised you still have time to drop by my office when you’re so obviously busy with your work.”

Jason picked up his coffee and took a sip before replying, “I wouldn’t say it’s busy work, but it sure is tedious. I’m so annoyed with it, so I came here to hang out with you.”

Lucas did not have the luxury of hanging out with Jason since he would have to go to a meeting.

At that moment, Edmund knocked on the door and entered without waiting for Lucas to give his permission.

“Sir, something bad has happened!” he said nervously.

Lucas looked up at him. “What?”

Edmund glanced at Jason. He knew he was Lucas’ best friend, so he did not bother to hide the news from him.

“Apparently, Miss Corinne has gone missing.”

Lucas’ eyes immediately darkened. “What? How is that possible?”

“There have been more bodyguards than usual outside of the Holdens’ mansion for the past two days, and we assumed it was because Mister Jeremy wanted to keep Corinne safe. This morning, Miss Corinne went to Central Park with Miss Pamela, but she somehow went missing. The Holdens have their entire house staff looking for her now.”

Lucas slammed down his coffee cup angrily. “Grr!

Corinne shouldn’t have married that good-for-nothing who can’t even keep his own wife safe. Edmund, take some men with you to look for her too. Bring her to me once you’ve found her. Under no circumstances should you take her back to the Holdens.”

“Yes, Mister Lucas!”

Lucas' expression remained worried after Edmund left the room. Jason, however, looked relaxed as though he was watching a movie. He had promised Corinne he would not tell Lucas anything.

"Chill, Lucas. Corinne was fine before she met Jeremy, so I'm pretty sure she'll be fine now too."

Lucas gave him a death glare. "It's easy for you to say since she's not your sister!"

Jason raised his eyebrow and sipped his coffee before saying with a smile, "It's true. She's not my sister. However, I do like her."

Lucas scoffed. "I suggest you give up liking her since she'll never be with you. No, I shouldn't waste my time talking to you here. I should go look for her myself. What if she falls again? What will happen to her and the baby?"

After that, he got up and hobbled slowly toward the door.

Jason immediately got up to stop him. "Oh, sit down!

You're in no condition to go look for her. You'll only be a burden to Edmund if you go look for Corinne now."

Lucas wished so badly he could throw away his crutches and run out of the office. "Oh, why does she have to go missing when my foot is injured?"

Jason patted his shoulder. "Trust me. Corinne will be fine."

It was then Lucas started to suspect something. “Why are you so sure? Do you know where she is?”

Jason shook his head and smiled. “Nope. But from what Edmund said, it sounded like Corinne purposely went missing to escape from the Holdens. If that’s the case, she must’ve planned out the whole thing, so you shouldn’t worry so much.”

Lucas frowned. “Corinne planned her escape from the Holdens? Why would she do that? I thought she and Jeremy were very much in love with each other?”

Jason shrugged. “I have no idea. I’m only guessing. It could be Corinne wasn’t happy at being kept at home.”

Lucas scoffed. “I shouldn’t have let Corinne marry Jeremy!”

Jason patted Lucas’ shoulder again. “Come now. You don’t want to hurt your foot again, so just wait here patiently. I’ll go look for Corinne on your behalf.”

After that, he strolled out of the office nonchalantly.

Frowning, Lucas watched him as he left before sighing helplessly.

‘I must make Corinne come back home once she’s found so that she’ll never have to suffer under Jeremy’s rule again.’

...

Jeremy rushed back home as soon as his plane landed at midnight. He did not even bother to greet his grandparents before going upstairs to his room to look for clues.

Even though Corinne was nowhere to be seen, the bedroom was still filled with the lingering scent of her favorite shampoo.

Jeremy opened the wardrobe and noted she did not take any clothes with her at all.

‘She left without saying goodbye again? But why?’ He punched the wardrobe door.

The noise brought Francine—who had been awake all the while—to the room.

Seeing the anguish on Jeremy’s face, Francine cautiously greeted, “Jeremy, you’re back.”

He turned toward Francine. “Did she say anything to you before she went missing?”

Francine shook her head. “No... She... Everything was normal. Neither Grandma her. We have no idea why...”

Jeremy balled his hands into fists and hissed, “Why did you bring her out?!”

Francine pouted. “She said she was bored out of her mind and needed some fresh air, so Grandma took pity on her and agreed to bring her out to Central Park...”

Jeremy took a deep breath. “Are you two happy now that she’s gone missing?”

“Jeremy, how can you say that?” asked Francine pitifully. At that moment, Sophia walked into the room too.

“Jeremy, you shouldn’t blame your grandmother and Francine too much. I’m sure they didn’t expect something like this to happen too. The most important thing now is to find Corinne.”

The veins on Jeremy’s temple looked like they were about to pop. He did not need her to tell him what was most important to do at that moment. He had mobilized all of his men to look for Corinne, but it was like she had vanished into thin air! Surprised by the strange woman who suddenly appeared, Francine looked up and down at Sophia. ‘Judging by the way she’s dressed, she doesn’t look like she’s from around here.’

“Jeremy, who’s this?” she asked warily.

Before Jeremy said anything, Sophia walked up to her with a smile and introduced herself brightly. “Hello. I’m Sophia. You must be Francine. Your brother has told me so much about you.”

Francine frowned. “Are you close with Jeremy? What are you doing at our home?”

“Yeah, we’re pretty close. We go way back.”

Francine looked at her with alarm. ‘If she’s close with Jeremy, how come he has never mentioned her? Could she be the reason why Jeremy fought with Corinne a few nights ago?’

Francine ignored Sophia and turned toward Jeremy in the hopes of unraveling the mystery. However, he left the room before she could even ask him.

“Jeremy, where are you going?!” shouted Francine as she chased after him.

However, it was Sophia who answered her instead. “Need you ask? He must’ve gone to look for Miss Corinne.”

Annoyed, Francine turned to her impatiently. “What exactly is your relationship with my brother? What right do you have to meddle in our family affairs?”

“Didn’t I already tell you I’m a very good friend of Jeremy’s?” answered Sophia cheerfully. Living abroad gave her a good temper and an open mind.

For some reason, Francine could not bring herself to like Sophia. “It’s still rude for you to barge in here even if you guys are close, so get out of here now!”

Sophia shrugged and spread her hands. “Where should I sleep tonight?”

Francine frowned in annoyance. “You can sleep in your home! Don’t tell me you’re expecting us to host you!”

“But my home is abroad. I don’t have a house here, and I didn’t have time to book a hotel ’cause everything happened so fast.”

The frown on Francine’s forehead became deeper. ‘Oh, so she lives abroad. No wonder she’s dressed so differently than the girls here. Anyway, why the heck did Jeremy bring her back here? Isn’t he worried Corinne will get mad at him?

No, wait. Corinne is already mad at him. Is that why she ran away? Because of this girl?’

As much as she did not like Sophia, she thought it would be rude to kick her out of the house since she was a good friend of Jeremy. After thinking through her options, she finally said roughly, “Fine. I’ll get the servants to prepare a room for you.”

However, Sophia shook her head. “I don’t want to sleep in the guest room. Don’t you know all the bad energy will gather in a room that doesn’t get used often? I think I’ll just sleep in this room since Miss Corinne isn’t here anyway.”

‘Bad energy?’ Francine thought she heard wrong. ‘This girl sounds like she has a screw loose in her head!’

“Miss Sophia, you’ve got to be kidding me, right? This bedroom belongs to Jeremy and Corinne, so do you really think it’s appropriate for you to sleep here?” asked Francine with a frown.

Sophia nodded. “I don’t see why it’s not appropriate. The two of them aren’t home, so it’s not like I’ll be sleeping with them.”

“No. I’m not going to let you do that. It might be fine in whatever country you come from, but it’s not fine here!

You can leave the house if you don’t want to sleep in the guest room,” said Francine forcefully.

“Well, I’m not going to sleep in the guest room,” insisted Sophia. “My tarot reader told me sleeping in the guest room will screw with my luck.”

‘What a superstitious idiot!’ thought Francine. She rolled her eyes and said, “You must’ve been scammed by your tarot reader.

I’ve never heard that sleeping in a guest room will screw with a person’s luck.”

Sophia shook her head. “It’s true! My tarot reader is very famous from where I come from. All of the things he predicted came true. Francine, if you won’t let me sleep here, can you let me sleep in your room? I’m fine with anywhere as long as it’s not the guest room!”

‘What? She wants to sleep in my room? Just how shameless can she be?’

“No! I don’t like other people sleeping in my room.”

At that moment, Sophia casually took off her jacket. “I guess I have no choice but to sleep here tonight.”

“What the heck is wrong with you?” shouted Francine.

“Who the heck sleeps in other people’s rooms the moment they arrive at somebody else’s home?”

Sophia shrugged. “I wouldn’t have to sleep here if you’d just agreed to let me sleep in your room.”

“Why should I agree? Who the heck do you think you are? You can’t just sleep wherever you please!”

“Francine, you should be sleeping. Why are you here making a ruckus in your brother’s room?” came Pamela’s tired voice from the hallway.

She could not sleep out of worry for Corinne, so she got up to see what was going on when she heard Francine shouting. A minute later, she pushed open the door.

“Grandma, Jeremy has brought a woman home. She claims she’s a very good friend of his. I asked her to go sleep in the guest room, but she insisted on sleeping here ’cause she doesn’t want the bad energy in the guest room to affect her luck,” said

Francine as soon as she saw Pamela. “Don’t you think she’s doing this on purpose?”

Pamela looked to where Francine was pointing and was stunned by the woman standing there.

“Hello, Grandma! I’m Sophia,” she greeted Pamela warmly. “Sorry if I’ve woken you up from your sleep.”

Pamela nodded after she snapped out of her shock.

“You’re more than welcome to stay since you’re already here, but not in this room. You can stay in Francine’s room, and she can go stay in the guest room.”

“Great! Thanks, Grandma,” said Sophia happily.

Francine was not happy about the arrangement at all.

“Grandma, why did you say she can sleep in my room? I won’t allow it!”

Pamela glared at her sternly. “Is this really the way to treat a guest?! She’s your brother’s friend and has come a long way from abroad. The least we could do is to make her stay comfortable. Now, go and get your room ready for Miss Sophia!”

Francine did not understand why Pamela would take an outsider’s side.

“But Grandma, Joey is sleeping in my room right now. It took me a lot coax him to sleep, so you can’t possibly expect me to wake him up, right?”

“You don’t have to wake him up. Just quietly carry him to the guest room!”

“Grandma!”

“Just do as I say!”

As much as Francine was not happy with the outcome, she did not dare to defy Pamela’s order. Thus, she stomped once and left the room.

‘Just who the heck is Sophia? Why does it seem like Grandma is pandering to her?’ she wondered.

After she left, Sophia smiled helplessly at Pamela. “Sorry for causing you trouble, Grandma.”

“Oh, it’s no trouble at all. It’s the least I can do after you helped our family so you go to Francine’s room to rest? Just let the servants know if you need anything else.”

“Well, don’t mind if I do,” said Sophia cheerfully before following Francine out of the room.

Pamela remained standing where she was. She looked meaningfully at Jeremy and Corinne’s bed before leaving the room and closing the door with a gentle click.

Meanwhile, Corinne was tossing and turning in the unfamiliar bedroom. Unable to sleep, she decided to play some games on the tablet. She was at the climax of the game when the doorbell suddenly rang.

‘Who could it be?’ she thought with alarm. ‘Jason said no one has lived in this apartment for a long time, so who would possibly come at this hour? I hope it’s not Jeremy’s men!’

She put down the tablet, got out of the bed quietly, and tiptoed to the main door’s peephole. However, the only thing she saw was an eye staring back at her, giving her a shock. Then, before she could figure out what was happening, she heard Jason's cheeky voice coming from the corridor. "Don't worry. You can open the door. It's me, Jason."

Corinne sighed with relief. Frowning, she opened the door and said, “What are you doing here so late?”

Jason raised the takeout bag in his hand. “I’m guessing you can’t sleep, so I bought you some supper.”

He then stepped inside and changed his shoes. His movements were so natural that Corinne found it hard to believe he had not been back in this apartment for a while.

Corinne closed the door and crossed her arms. “Jason, I know I was the one who asked for your help, but you shouldn’t take it upon yourself to do things I didn’t ask.”

Jason ignored her and walked into the kitchen to get some plates out. “It’s cajun crawfish. Do you want some?”

“Of course I want some,” said Corinne with a frown.

Jason laughed and beckoned with his finger at her. “Well, what are you waiting for? Come over here! The cajun crawfish from this restaurant are delicious.”

Corinne walked over and saw Jason had already put the cajun crawfish on the plate. They looked and smelled really good.

However, she could not help but find it odd that someone like Jason would eat cheap food like that.

Jason passed her a fork and spoon. “Go on, give it a try,” he prompted her with a smile.

Corinne reached out but did not take the fork and spoon from him. “Who eats crawfish with a fork and spoon? Do you have disposable plastic gloves?”

Jason shoved the fork and spoon into her hand with a smile. He then pressed her shoulder down to sit.

Corinne frowned. ‘Is he deaf or something? I told him I didn’t want the fork and spoon but a pair of disposable gloves! The restaurant should’ve given out some disposable plastic gloves!’

She was internally complaining when she saw Jason putting on a pair of disposable plastic gloves. She was about to say something when Jason started peeling the crawfish and putting the flesh on a little plate for her.

Corinne was a little taken aback. ‘What... What is he doing? Not only did he bring me supper, but he’s actually peeling the crawfish for me?’

“Why aren’t you eating?” asked Jason when he noticed Corinne staring dazedly at him.

Corinne snapped out of her trance. “You don’t have to do this. I can do it myself.”

Jason smiled. “I don’t mind doing it. The only thing you have to do when I’m around is eat.”

Corinne did not know what to say. She knew he was doing it out of kindness, but still, she felt very conflicted about it.

She picked up her fork and started eating the peeled crawfish from the little plate while observing Jason’s skilled crawfish deshelling movement.

“Mister Jason, did you train yourself to be so good at shelling crawfish to get girls?” she asked.

Jason’s hands froze. He looked up at her and said, “Why do you always think I have an ulterior motive for doing something? I could just be a natural at this.”

Corinne’s lips twitched. “Since when did a rich kid like you need to shell their own seafood? Unless you’re doing it to get girls, I don’t see why you’d do it.”

Jason scoffed. “Heh! You’re really underestimating me. I don’t need to do this to get girls. In fact, I don’t need to do anything to have girls throwing themselves at me. You’re the only girl in the world who ignores me all the time.”

Corinne's lips twitched for a second. She then ate a big mouthful of the crawfish. "And yet, you keep showing your face in front of me even when I ignore you."

Jason put a freshly-peeled crawfish next to her lips.

"That's why I'm working hard to make you not ignore me."

Corinne was not used to being fed by another person, so she stabbed the crawfish with her fork before putting it into her mouth.

Jason did not mind her rejection. "Do you want to know what the Holdens are doing?" he asked with a smile.

Corinne was a little taken aback by the sudden question and said nothing.

She had been avoiding using her electronic devices or contacting Xante and Aaron the whole day. She was worried Jeremy would hunt her down using GPS technology. Although she had no idea what was going on with the Holdens, she could probably guess it.

The Holdens must have mobilized their entire household staff to look for her since she was carrying their bloodline. They would never allow their kin to be wandering like a hobo outside. Not wanting to talk about the Holdens, Corinne changed the topic. “You’re right. The crawfish is delicious. Where did you buy it from? Can you send me the address later?”

Jason raised his eyebrow. “What’s the point of sending you the address? You’ll be going abroad soon enough, so it’s not like you can buy it anymore.”

“Oh, right. I nearly forgot about it,” said Corinne nonchalantly.

“Tsk! Don’t scare me like that. I thought you’d changed your mind and wanted to go back to Jeremy.”

It was impossible for that to happen since Corinne was the kind that would not change her mind once she decided.

“Enough about me. Can I interview you, Jason?”

Jason looked at her with great interest. “Interview me? Of course you can. What do you want to ask?”

Corinne looked around the two bedrooms and the living room in the apartment. “You said you lived here when you were little, but didn’t you come from a rich family? Why would your parents let you live in such an old apartment?”

Something flashed across Jason’s eyes when he heard the questions. He did not stop peeling the crawfish as he answered, “Didn’t Jeremy tell you? I’m not my parents’ biological son.”

Corinne’s expression changed. “No, he didn’t. Does that mean you’re adopted?”

Jason smiled and explained, “I guess you can call me that. My adoptive parents used to have a son, but he died when he was little. Due to some unique reason, my adopted father was unable to have another child, so he decided to adopt a kid from his relatives to be his successor.

“I was the son of a distant relative of his. Both of my parents died, and for that reason, I was chosen to be his adopted son.

Growing up, I was raised to be his successor. This house was where we lived as a family.”

‘That solves the mystery,’ thought Corinne. She could not help but look at Jason with sympathy for the same plight they found themselves in when they were mere kids.

Though he was lucky to be chosen to be a rich family's successor, he must have felt trapped at the same time since he had no say in anything. Both he and Corinne grew up living under somebody else's roof with no sense of belonging. "How old were you when they adopted you?" asked Corinne.

"Around seven or eight years old. I can remember almost everything about my birth parents."

Corinne put down her fork and rested her chin on her hand. “I’m actually quite surprised you turned out cheerful and optimistic.”

Jason smiled. “Cheerful and optimistic? I guess. But you should know there’s a lot of pressure that comes with being a successor. The training was so harsh that I didn’t even get to enjoy my childhood. Not to mention, everyone treats me like I’m nothing just because I’m not the biological son. It was hard to make friends in the wealthy circle. When I first took over the company, the directors in the company were so angry that they couldn't wait for me to fail."

Corinne nodded sympathetically. "I can imagine how hard it must've been for you back then. But aren't you glad you pushed through 'cause everyone has to bow to you now?"

Jason smiled wryly. "They only do that to my face, but when my back is turned, they'll talk sh*t about me. Even Jeremy, Zeke, and Gerald think I'm beneath them. The only person in the world who treats me like an equal is Lucas."

Corinne found it odd he would say that. She assumed Lucas was the type who thought everyone was beneath him. While it was true Jeremy, Zeke, and Gerald were closer to each other, it did not mean they looked down on Jason. Otherwise, they would not have hung out with him.

"You're overthinking things. Jeremy's not the type to look down on others," said Corinne.

Jason narrowed his eyes. "Even now you're still speaking up for him?"

"I'm not speaking up for him. I'm just giving you an impartial observation. If he's really the type that judges people by their background, he wouldn't have married a country bumpkin like me."

Jason chuckled coldly. “But you said he was playing you, right? Isn’t that the reason you’re running away from him?”

Corinne was speechless. ‘He’s right. Why did I speak up for Jeremy at all?’

“You know what? Let’s just forget about him. You should eat some of the crawfish too!” said Corinne in a friendlier tone than usual.

Jason smiled. “It’s okay. I’m happy to just peel them for you.”

Corinne rolled her eyes. “I can’t possibly finish all of them. Besides, it’s lonely eating by myself. It’ll be more enjoyable if you share them with me.”

“Alright. I’ll eat them with you.” Jason sat down to eat with her.

Corinne started peeling her own crawfish since it tasted better when she did it herself.

“Corinne, do you know why I’m so sure you’re more compatible with me than Jeremy?” asked Jason suddenly. Corinne, who was still peeling the crawfish, raised her eyebrow. “And here I thought you’d be quiet while eating.”

Jason smiled. “But it’ll be boring if we don’t talk.”

“Didn’t your mama ever teach you to keep your mouth shut while eating?”

Jason's lips twitched. He could tell Corinne was trying to avoid the topic, but he did not care; he would tell her even if she did not want to hear.

"We're more compatible since we had a similar childhood which gave us the values we have now. On the other hand, you and Jeremy come from different worlds. The two of you together is like trying to fit a square block into a round hole, while we share the same language."

Corinne was not really in the mood to talk matters of the heart with Jason. "Thousands of people share the same childhood, but that doesn't mean they're compatible. Mister Jason, you should go back home if you're not interested in eating the crawfish."

Jason smiled helplessly. "Fine. I won't talk about this topic anymore."

Jeremy drove to Aaron's home, or more accurately, the home of Aaron, Xante, and Corinne. After getting out of the elevator, he persistently rang the doorbell. When nobody came to the door, he started to pound on the door angrily.

It was a good thing there was only one unit of apartment on each floor, or someone would have complained about the noise.

After a while, the door finally opened under Jeremy's persistent pounding.

Aaron, dressed in his pajamas, scratched his head sleepily. "Mister Jeremy, what are you doing here so late?"

Jeremy was seething with anger. "Where's Corinne? Ask her to come out this instant!"

Aaron shrugged and spread his hand nonchalantly.

"Mister Jeremy, your men had already checked my car and found nothing. I don't get why you're asking me where Corinne is. I should be the one asking you where she is."

Jeremy ignored what he said, pushed him to the side, and strode impatiently into the living room.

"Corinne Carew, get your *ss out here this instant!"

Aaron followed him in with a frown. "Mister Jeremy, do you know what you're doing is called 'trespassing'? I can call the cops on you," he said unhappily.

Jeremy ignored him again. He strode over to the room where he saw Corinne packing her bags last time and knocked on the door. Not getting a response, he opened the door and walked in.

However, there was no one inside except for a fat white cat curled up lazily on the bed. It immediately hissed and raised its hackles when it saw a stranger barging in.

Aaron walked into the room, picked up the cat, and started stroking its fur to calm it down. “That’s enough, Mister Jeremy! She’s really not here!”

Jeremy’s bloodshot eyes scanned every corner of the room, and they inevitably darkened when he saw no signs of Corinne.

“Where are you hiding her this time?”

Aaron looked hurt. “I’ve already told you. We have no idea where she is. Mister Jeremy, it seems like this time Corinne is really determined to hide from you. Do you think she’ll come to a place where you can find her? She even cut off contact with us just so you won’t be able to trace her. We tried calling her today, but all of our calls went straight to voicemail!”

Jeremy balled his hands into fists. He was so angry he felt like his chest was about to explode. ‘D*mn that little rascal! Looks like she's hellbent on hiding from me. Why can't she be like other wives?'

He understood it was normal for a spouse to get angry and pretend to run away from home, but they would always choose a place where they could easily be found by their husbands.

Corinne, however, would escape to a parallel universe if she could just to get as far away from him as possible.

"Mister Jeremy, instead of looking for her, maybe you should ask yourself why Corinne would want to leave you. I suggest you stop looking for her if you did something to hurt her.

From my understanding of her, she'll never forgive you even if you find her," said Aaron roughly when he saw how dark Jeremy's expression was.

Jeremy frowned. "What are you talking about? What did I do to hurt her?"

Aaron scoffed. "How should I know? I'm just telling you that Corinne will never disappear for no good reason."

Jeremy's eyes darkened. "Do you or do you not know where she is?"

Aaron put his hand up and said, "I swear I don't know. I wanted to ask her too, but she must've turned off her phone. None of my calls went through."

Aaron was telling the truth; he genuinely did not know where Corinne was hiding. To avoid Jeremy finding her, Corinne forbade them to call her on the phone she was using then.

Jeremy said nothing as Corinne's original phone was with him. Before he went to Molomia, he programmed the phone to only be able to receive calls from him and other emergency numbers.

He could sense Corinne was plotting her escape, which was why he dispatched more bodyguards to keep an eye on her. He thought that by keeping her under house arrest, he would have all the time in the world to solve the problems between them after he came back from Molomia. Thus, he was understandably shocked when he received news of Corinne's escape.

Jeremy did not mean to make life difficult for Aaron.

Thus, after looking around once more to confirm Corinne was not in the area, he said coldly, “Call me the moment you have news of her.”

Aaron wanted to curse at him but ultimately chose to cooperate with him to avoid suspicion. “Sure. You have my word.”

Jeremy left after that.

Xante walked out of her room and happened to see Jeremy walking into the elevator. She narrowed her eyes suspiciously and said, “He looks like he’s really panicking.”

Aaron scoffed. “Of course he’s panicking. What man wouldn’t panic when the woman carrying his baby has gone missing?”

Xante shook her head. “No. I don’t think it’s the baby he’s worrying about.”

“So what? At the end of the day, he lied to the boss. It makes me sick to see him pretending to be worried when he’s married to another woman abroad,” said Aaron angrily.

“What if he has his reason for doing that?”

“I failed to think of any reason that would warrant him to get legally married to another woman abroad. And even if he did, he could explain it to the boss instead of lying to her. He should know the boss will try to see things from his side.”

Xante shrugged. “I was just guessing. Anyway, I wonder where the boss is right now and if she’s eaten.”

“She should be fine. Didn’t she say someone else is helping her? I’m pretty sure she’s at some nice place waiting for the dust to settle so she can call us.”

Xante sighed and nodded. “I do hope so.”

Corinne did not tell Xante and Aaron that the person she had asked for help was Jason as she knew Jeremy would definitely go to their place to look for her. The less people know about Jason, the better.

Xante went to close the door to stop the cat from running out before going back to her bedroom.

“Xante, wait!” called Aaron.

Xante turned back to look at him with a raised eyebrow.

“Yeah?”

Aaron took out his phone and threw it toward Xante, who caught it without any trouble.

“What’s this?”

Aaron smiled sinisterly. “Your little lover boy has been calling me nonstop to ask me where you are, so why don’t you tell him yourself?”

Xante frowned and looked down at Aaron's phone, which he had put in silent mode. There was an incoming call, and she did not need the caller ID to tell her it was from Sunny. Her sleepiness gave way to frustration as she thought, 'Oh my god, he's so annoying!'

"You can just turn off your phone, you know," she said impatiently.

Aaron gave a helpless shrug. "Your little lover says he'll call the cops on me for kidnapping you if I turn off my phone. I don't want to go down to the police station if I can help it."

Xante was speechless. 'That crazy son of a b*tch.'

She took Aaron's phone back to her room. When Sunny called her again, she leaned back against her headboard with a frown to take the call.

"Aaron! My sources tell me you live together with Xante! Don't think I won't really call the cops if you don't let her answer my calls!"

"Call the cops, then. I dare you," said Xante coldly.

There was a brief silence before Sunny said in a high-pitched voice, "Xante! Thank god you finally answered the phone! I was worried sick about you.”

“What’s there to worry about me?” asked Xante in an annoyed tone.

Sunny did not know how to answer her, so he scoffed haughtily and said, “I don’t know, but just know that I worry about you whenever I can’t contact you.”

Xante could not stand him anymore. “Sunny Rivera, I was fine before you came along, and I’m going to be fine whether you’re in my life or not! Stop harassing my friend ’cause there’s really nothing to worry about. Understood?!”

Sunny inhaled sharply, and his voice sounded a little bit off when he childishly replied, “Fine, whatever. I didn’t mean to bother your friend, but how can I not panic when it was always Corinne who picked up your phone when I called you for the past two days? It’s not like I can go find you since Lucas has grounded me.”

Xante sat up straighter. “What did you say? Corinne picked up when you called my phone?”

Sunny nodded. “Yeah. I was sort of wondering why she had your phone.”

“What did you two talk about?” asked Xante darkly.

“No... Nothing,” answered Sunny guiltily.

“So you did talk about something. Tell me what it is now!”

“Well... Umm... I didn’t know it was her who picked up the call, so I said you need to take responsibility for me after sleeping with me...”

Xante facepalmed herself. “And what did she say after that?”

“She asked me when it happened,” replied Sunny in a trembling voice.

“How did you answer?” Xante was starting to get a headache.

“I didn’t answer her since I remember you told me not to let her know anything about us! So I quickly hung up the phone,” answered Sunny honestly.

Xante massaged her temples. ‘What’s the point of him hanging up the phone when he already told Corinne what he shouldn’t have told her? She must be mad at me for sleeping with her kid brother. But it wasn’t like I meant for that to happen. It’s all Sunny’s fault for giving in so easily and not stopping when I told him to!’

“It’s getting late. You should go to bed now. Don’t call me unless there’s an emergency. I have no time to play with you,” said

Xante.

She was about to hang up the phone when Sunny said in a trembling voice, “I’m actually outside...and it’s so cold... I can’t sleep when it’s so cold...” Xante’s thumb froze. “Why are you still outside when it’s so late?” she asked with a frown.
