

The Day I Kissed An Older Man by Cher the Cherished

Chapter 247

Chapter 247

However, not only was Corinne not embarrassed, but she also nodded frankly. “Well, I am not used to it. I rarely spend money on such insignificant leisure and entertainment. I’m usually pretty frugal with my spending.”

Rosie chuckled and looked at Corinne with the attitude of an aristocrat looking down on commoners.

“It doesn’t matter. We just have different values, and you’ll get used to it gradually. Rich and idle people like us usually have a lot of free time, and there’s nothing we need to do by ourselves, so we like to play around and spend money everywhere, spend some money to have some fun.”

Corinne’s expression was brief. “Oh, that sounds nice.”

“Corinne, you should stay with us to nurture and be immersed in this life from now on,” said Rosie, sounding tolerant and accepting. “Otherwise, you’ll have different views when you’re with Jeremy, who was pampered since childhood, and it’ll be difficult for you to live together!”

Corinne raised his eyebrows. “Is that so? Well, he should be educated in getting rid of his arrogance and extravagance!”

She and Jeremy were not from the same world, and she never thought of assimilating into his lifestyle, so why should she integrate into their odd values? It was very superficial!

As soon as Corinne spoke, everyone was stunned for a moment. Then, Zeke could not help but slap Gerald’s shoulder as he let out a soft chuckle.

What a girl. She had a personality!

The others, too, looked at Corinne with different thoughts and opinions, but there was a layer of admiration in their eyes.

At the very least, no other woman dared to say that about Jeremy except her!

Corinne, however, did not realize that Jeremy had already returned by the time she spoke.

Upon hearing her remarks, the man stopped and stood at the door of the room, his eyebrows furrowed and his long eyes narrowed as he looked at her quietly with an expression of mixed emotions.

Arrogant? Extravagant?

Did this little rascal just say that about her husband?

Rosie was stunned for a moment, then smiled contemptuously when she came back to her senses. “Corinne, you really know how to joke! You want Jeremy to change for you? That’s impossible, I’m afraid. You know Jeremy was raised in the pampered laps of the Holden family, so how could he easily change his lifestyle? In fact, he’s so eligible that he doesn’t need to make any changes!”

Corinne did not think so and raised her eyebrows lazily. “I’m sorry, but I’m not kidding when I say I don’t agree with your values. If you want ‘change, you’ll have to ask him to change it instead of asking me to be held by the distorted values of you rich kids, You’re influenced by edification and twisted into a vain, arrogant person. I don’t think there are any problems with my values, and I don’t plan to change them, thank you!”

What?

Distortion? Vanity? Arrogance?

Rosie felt that Corinne’s words had offended everyone in the room.

She sighed peculiarly. “No, that’s not right. You’re so stubborn! It looks like you’re destined to find it difficult to agree with Jeremy’s views. With all due respect, such a marriage without consistent views is generally difficult to last!”

That did not matter to Corinne. After all, their relationship was fake, and it would not last long.

“I don’t need an outsider to judge whether my views are consistent with my wife’s,” rang the man’s deep and calm voice, not of anger but intimidation.