

Chapter 949 Hide In The Bamboo Forest

It was a snowy night, and the temperature in the forest was freezing. But the moon was out and shone on the bed of snow below. Although it was chilly, it was not dark.

Pearce took Trevor all the way to the depths of the forest. They walked along the terrain until they arrived in front of a bamboo forest.

Pearce rolled up his sleeves. Then he turned to Trevor and said slowly, "This is where you are going to take the test."

When Trevor saw Pearce roll up his sleeves, he was confused. Were they going to have a fighting test? But why did they have to come to the bamboo forest? They could just fight in the ordinary forest, right?

"The rule is very simple. You close your eyes for ten seconds, then the test officially begins. You have two hours to find me. If you can do that, you pass the test. My movements are limited only in this bamboo forest, so you don't need to go somewhere else."

Trevor couldn't help raising his eyebrows. "Is this some kind of a hide-and-peek game?"

A smile appeared on Pearce's wrinkled face. "Hide-and-peek game. That's interesting. Yes, the rules are almost the same. Let's start now."

Trevor fell silent for a while, pondering. He didn't find any loopholes in the rules, so he closed his eyes to start the test and began to count aloud.

But he didn't let his guard down. While counting, he pricked up his ears, trying to identify the direction where Pearce hid through the sound.

Of course, Pearce was also on guard against Trevor. He knew that Trevor was trying to identify his position. So his thin figure walked fast on the snow, but he made sure not to make any sound.

He was like a ghost, leaving no trace at all.

At the count of ten, Trevor opened his eyes. Pearce was already nowhere in sight.

Trevor looked around, and he was horrified by what he saw. The snowy surroundings were covered with footprints.

It only meant that the moment he closed his eyes and counted, Pearce walked around him at a close distance.

But he didn't even notice it.

It made Trevor realize that Pearce's strength was indeed unfathomable.

Trevor exhaled deeply and concentrated. With the help of the light from the moon in the sky, he observed the surroundings of the bamboo forest carefully. Then he walked into the depths of the bamboo forest step by step.

At this moment, the sound of bamboo leaves swaying with the wind suddenly came to Trevor's ears from behind.

Trevor was alerted at once. He turned his head to have a look, only to see a bent bamboo swinging towards him like a long whip.

He quickly straddled a few steps back to avoid the menacing bamboo. But unfortunately, he was not able to avoid the snow that fell from the bamboo leaves.

When his vision was blocked, he heard a screeching noise from one side of the bamboo forest.

It was another bamboo attack.

Trevor was so upset that he felt his scalp tingle. Now, he finally understood why Pearce said the hide-and-seek game was interesting.

Actually, this test was much more dangerous than the hide-and-seek game.

Knowing that the bamboo was about to approach him, Trevor hurriedly dodged.

The three-month training Trevor had undergone helped make his reaction speed excellent. So his dodging ability was commendable.

But at this moment, all the bamboos in the entire bamboo forest seemed to have come to life. They turned into long whips, whipping him crazily.

Trevor dodged left and right on the thick bed of snow. But he could only barely keep himself from being hit.

The bamboo leaves occasionally scratched his skin, leaving a trace of pain. Fortunately, it was tolerable.

While Trevor was running, he occasionally saw a ghostly figure flashing silently out of the corner of his eye. The figure bent the bamboo with his hand and then released it.

It turned out this was the reason why the bamboos seemed to have lives and kept attacking him from all directions.

If these bamboos kept attacking him one after another, how could he point out Pearce's hiding place?

At the thought of this, Trevor's heart sank. He had a feeling that he couldn't let this continue. He had to find a way.

While dodging, he shook off the snow on his clothes and tried to hide himself in the bamboo forest.

At this moment, the surroundings became a little dim.

He looked at the sky and saw through the gaps from the bamboo leaves that a thick dark cloud was approaching the moon, about to cover its shine.

"It seems that the clouds are on my side. This is a good opportunity for me," Trevor murmured as he took off his coat and hung it on the branch of a short bamboo.

Then he quickly hid aside and secretly observed.

Sure enough, when the dark clouds unveiled the moon again, he saw Pearce launch an attack using the bamboos again.

This time, Trevor didn't have to worry about hiding anymore. Because his sharp eyes suddenly found something unusual.

Pearce was under a bamboo on the opposite, still trying to bend the bamboos.

After making sure that his eyes did not deceive him, he shouted, "Master, I found you!"
