

Chapter 834 The Connection

Bowen readily agreed to Liam's request.

A simple thing like enrolling a student in Oracle Kindergarten was not a big deal for him.

Liam thought about his son's previous experiences in kindergarten. He promptly added, "I wish for my son to enroll in school without any preferential treatment. I want to ensure he isn't subjected to bullying. If he can forge positive relationships with children of his age and thrive in a healthy environment, it would be wonderful."

If Bowen was smart enough to become the governor, he could certainly figure out what Liam meant. He didn't want to expose his son's identity and make him feel isolated.

"Don't worry. I'll handle it," assured Bowen.

After ending the call, Bowen swiftly reached out to the principal of Oracle Kindergarten. "Darin, a friend's child wants admission to your school. Please make the necessary arrangements," he instructed.

If Bowen was calling him personally, Darin knew that it must be the child of some big shot. Smiling to himself, he asked hesitantly, "May I ask whose child it is that you're vouching for?"

Bowen smiled too. He knew what was on Darin's mind, but he wouldn't expose Liam's identity. "Don't pry into matters that aren't your concern. I can only reveal that this kid's connections run deeper than mine. So run a tight ship in your school. No trouble, okay? If any issues arise with this child, I can't help you," he replied cryptically.

Darin knew that when Bowen was cautious like this, this warning was not something he could ignore. "Thank you for the heads up. Don't worry. I will take care of it!" he promised solemnly.

After hanging up the phone, Darin paused for a moment. Then he sent a quick message to Cowan, the director of the dean's office, asking him to arrange for an additional student. He didn't provide any further explanation.

After Bowen took care of everything, he sent Liam a message notifying him that his son was accepted into kindergarten.

Liam had been waiting at the registration office in Oracle Kindergarten for a while. Once he received confirmation from Bowen, he took Asher's hand and walked towards the line at the registration window.

There were only a few people waiting in line.

As the school year had already begun, most of the applicants were transfers from other schools. Since Oracle Kindergarten's review process was very strict, there were only a handful of applicants, just as Liam expected.

However, even with this number of people in the queue, the progress was unusually slow.

There were only three or four people in line before Liam, but even after half an hour, the line didn't move forward at all.

Liam frowned slightly and peered into the registration window. The woman in charge of the process was flirting with a young man. She was going through the procedure halfheartedly.

But the people in line did not dare to express their anger because the woman was Gabrielle, the daughter of Roberto, Deputy Director of Oracle Kindergarten. She was not someone to mess with. Confronting her was like confronting Roberto.

Nobody wanted to ruin their child's chances of joining this prestigious school. No matter how annoyed they were feeling, they had to endure it.

Another hour later, it was finally Liam's turn.

Despite feeling irritated, Liam controlled his anger as his son's future was at stake. He handed Gabrielle the necessary documents and requested her to complete the registration process.

However, Gabrielle didn't take the documents. "It's time for my lunch break. Come back in the afternoon," she said to him lazily, dismissing him.

With that, Gabrielle started to close the window, but Liam stopped her.

He was livid. He had put up with Gabrielle's inefficiency long enough. "It's only half past eleven now. You have to work until noon. I advise you to follow the rules!"
