

Arabella 431

Chapter 431

"There are pajamas, suits, shirts, socks, and so on, and also," Arabella trailed off before she could finish.

"And what else?"

"You'll see when you get home."

Seeing a slight blush on Arabella's face, Romeo had a hunch and leaned in to whisper, "Is it intimate apparel?"

He chuckled, "How did you know my size?"

"Romeo!"

"You look so adorable when you're blushing." Romeo gently touched her face, his eyes full of affection, "I never thought you'd have such a shy side. It's too cute. You're so generous."

Either she gave no gifts at all, or she gave a whole load of them.

"This is my first time giving gifts. If there are things you don't like, you don't have to force yourself to keep them."

for the past few days, the new tune wasn’t even recorded yet, how did Romeo find out so quickly?

“He was showing off to me last night.”

Arabella was speechless. So that was how it was.

Arabella caught a hint of jealousy in his words, and she chuckled, “If you like, I could write a song for you next time.”

“Really?”

“Really.”

Romeo reached out to stroke her hair, “I knew my fiancée had me in her heart.”

Once Arabella wrote a new song, he would show it off to David, to let him know who was in Arabella’s heart.

The next moment, Romeo kissed Arabella, the two embracing each other passionately.

Carl, who was halfway through his drink, suddenly stopped, worried about making a sound.

He thought, can he ask for leave and go home now?

Why!

Why did they have to punch him in the soul!

Wasn't working overtime painful enough?

After what seemed like a long time, Romeo stopped, his eyes only on Arabella.

David finished his endorsement shoot, it was already completely dark. He took out his phone and called Arabella, “Bella, have you eaten? Let's go out for dinner.”

“I've already eaten.” Arabella's calm voice came from the phone, “You just finished work? Haven't you eaten yet?”

The fact that he could speak such sweet words was simply unbelievable.

'Dawn Department Store, twenty shops, even the rent is free? You're really generous, Arabella's voice echoed in Romeo's ear.

For a large shopping center like this, the monthly rent for a shop was about three to five thousand dollars. But the twenty shops Romeo offered were in prime locations and were next to each other. A conservative estimate for the monthly rent would be around one hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

"Do you like it?" There was a hint of indulgence in Romeo's tone. Supporting his fiancée's business was his duty as a fiancé, wasn't it?

"Business

is business, I should still pay the rent." She couldn't take such a huge advantage for no reason. It would make her feel guilty.

"Are you being so meticulous with me? If you don't take advantage of your own people, who else can you take advantage of?" Romeo's voice was pleasing to the ear. "You must understand that as long as you need it, the whole McMillian Corporation can pave the way for you and help your business grow."

"Welcome to the QY counter, how can I assist you today?" A polite sales associate immediately approached and asked gently. "Hey, my fiancée has got a big dinner tonight, do you have any suitable dresses and accessories for her?" Zachary asked. "Absolutely. Every piece of clothing from QY is one-of-a-kind worldwide, I guarantee your girlfriend will be the center of attention." The sales associate led the way and said, "Please, follow me."

"Your store is huge." Yolanda noticed that the neighboring LV store only occupied three storefronts, while QY took up twenty. "Your rent must be sky-high, huh?" "Actually, it's rent-free," the associate replied with a polite smile. "We've officially partnered with McMillian Corporation, that's their gesture of goodwill." Goodwill?

McMillian Corporation was splashing the cash, providing rent-free accommodation for twenty storefronts.

Yolanda suddenly felt a pang of envy. Being partnered with McMillian Corporation, QY had a bright future ahead, unlike their current predicament in the Murphy family, where large corporations had all severed ties with them.

She was a little down in the dumps at the thought.

"Here's our evening wear section, would you like me to make some recommendations, or would you like to browse on your own?"

"I'll take a look myself." Yolanda reached out to touch the new arrivals, unable to suppress her excitement.

Yolanda was about to speak, but Arabella rushed up and gave her a stern slap.

"Arabella!" Zachary didn't expect that Arabella would dare to slap Yolanda in front of so many people. He was both shocked and a bit pissed off.

He figured Arabella must be green with envy.

Envious that he chose Yolanda over her, envious that he was shopping with Yolanda instead of her.

Envious that he had always been pursuing her, but then suddenly went radio silent.

Yolanda was almost mad with anger at the slap, her cheek swollen and her hair disheveled.

A salesperson who happened to pass by quickly asked, "What happened?"

"I remember Ms. Murphy doesn't seem to have the right to purchase QY brand products?" Arabella suddenly said.

Zachary was stunned, staring wide-eyed at Yolanda, "Yoli, is what she's saying true?"

"Zachary, you don't need to ask anymore. If you all believe her, then let me prove it to you." Yolanda looked especially sad as her eyes glistened with tears as she spoke.

For a moment, Zachary felt that he had gone too far, that he had been misled by Arabella into believing her lies.

was his fiancée, she had given him the most precious thing and he not only failed to protect her, but also doubted her along with this stranger.

With that in mind, he took Yolanda's hand, stating decisively, "No need for proof. You say she's blacklisted, show me the evidence. If not, I'll complain to QY's headquarters and let your founders see how you employees are tarnishing QY's reputation, and how you're treating key customers."

The manager found this amusing, did these two young people not know that QY's founder was right in front of them?

Dawn Department Store was a high-end retail company owned by McMllian Corporation. If the opportunity for cooperation was lost, it would undoubtedly have a significant impact on QY.

After hanging up the phone, Zachary turned to the store manager and Arabella, "You guys wanna apologize now? Too late!"

"Who said I was gonna apologize?"

Arabella had been enjoying the drama from the sidelines as if it had nothing to do with her. She smiled faintly, seemingly very interested, "Done with your call? Is there one more person you should call? Shouldn't your parents be there when you need support?"

Right, parents.

Yolanda didn't expect Arabella to suggest this.

Even though Yolanda was reluctant, she went into the changing room under everyone's watchful eyes, changed into her dress, and handed it to the clerk. Just as she was about to leave, the clerk hurriedly ran up to her.

"Wait." A store employee hurriedly caught up, "Miss, you've broken the zipper on your dress. And there's a tear on the side."

Upon hearing this, Zachary frowned, "What kind of material is this? How come it breaks so easily?"

"Sir, it's because your fiancée's waist is a bit too thick. This skirt is designed for slender waists. Your fiancée should have felt it tight around her waist when she tried it on. She must have squeezed into it"

Yolanda bit her lip. It was true that she had to take a few deep breaths to barely squeeze into the dress when she put it on earlier.

She just wanted to create the illusion of a slim waist, but she wasn't careful when taking off the dress, and ended up tearing it.

The clerk patiently explained, "According to our policy, you guys are blacklisted customers without purchasing rights. But since you've damaged the merchandise, you will have to pay the full price, which is 1.3 million dollars for this dress. Would you like to pay by credit card or cash?"

Hearing this number, Zachary's mood soured. Was it that expensive?

How could Arabella possibly be Jaime's boss??

At that moment, the mall manager received a message and hurried over.
