

The Princess and the Pauper (Arabella)

Chapter 875

Chapter 875

The light in Clark's eyes dimmed instantly. Yeah, if she chose to hide or if she was being held against her will.

Clark couldn't bear to continue that line of thought.

"However, there is indeed a record of her parents leaving the country about two or three months ago."

Upon hearing Arabella's words, Clark immediately asked, "Where did they go?"

"Lidaria."

Upon hearing this, Clark was uncertain whether to worry or panic, "If Carol isn't in Lidaria, then their trip is in vain."

Not to mention, they had never left their small town for most of their lives. Now they were in a foreign country, far away, and completely unfamiliar.

"I have asked people to check their whereabouts. I believe there will be news soon." Arabella saw that Clark was in a bad mood and whispered, "This matter can't be rushed. There are too many situations involved. You should eat and drink now, and save more energy."

Upon hearing his sister's comforting words, Clark couldn't help but feel a warmth in his heart. He wasn't sure if he'd ever see Carol again.

But seeing his sister this understanding and adorable, his heart still warmed up, feeling all fuzzy.

Having a sister felt so good.

Why hadn't he felt this with Serena before?

"Don't run yourself ragged; eat something first."

Clark never thought that his anchor would be his sister now.

Looking at her calm and wise face, it felt as if she could hold up the sky if it were to fall.

It was oddly reassuring.

Arabella even picked up his fork and served him some dishes.

After Clark had eaten, Arabella whispered, "I'm going to visit Villa Cascada"

There were still four unidentified people locked up there.

Just as Clark was about to say he'd accompany her, a voice rang out.

"Clark!"

Serena ran over. Seeing Arabella, she greeted her with a sweet smile as if nothing had happened that morning.

"Clark, I need to talk to you!"

Arabella glanced at Clark, "I'll be going first."

"Hold on: Clark really wanted to go with her, but Serena quickly grabbed his arm, asking with a grin, "Clark, I've been waiting for you all morning! I have something to tell you."

Seeing Arabella's retreating figure, Clark could only say, "What was that? Tell me."

"I've been a bit busy these past few days, haven't had time to be with you." Clark said guiltily. Then, turning to the girl beside him, he suddenly remembered something, "Oh right, did you go shopping last night?"

Serena had been beating around the bush, wondering how to start the conversation, but Clark took the initiative to ask!

She was secretly delighted but kept a poker face, "Yes, Martha went with me."

"I had something urgent last night. Didn't mean to stand you up."

Clark explained. Then, turning to his sister, he asked caringly, "Did you find something you liked?"

"Yes!" Serena said happily, "There are so many new arrivals this season. They're so pretty, I couldn't resist and go a little overboard."

She playfully stuck her tongue out as she said this, showing off her mischievous side.
