

Arabella 1583

Chapter 1583

Arabella had seen the fervor of fans before, but still, the energy in the air was electric.

"Oh yeah, is David coming home for New Year's Eve? Does he have to work?" Arabella asked casually.

"David cleared his schedule for those days. He said it's his sister's first New Year back home, and he's determined to spend it with her. He was so adamant about it, even pushed back against his agent, who finally gave in."

Arabella didn't expect David to make time for her like that, and her heart softened at the thought.

"I'll be home, too."

"I'll let David know. He'll be thrilled."

"I've got to head off now."

"Don't forget my engagement party!" Jossie called out with a wave.

"I'll be there."

"Not bad."

"Let's get some water to soothe your throat first."

Every VIP seat had a bottle of mineral water. Romeo opened it and helped her take a few sips.

Arabella's throat felt much better.

She noticed the floor was spotless. The fans had taken their litter away in little bags, and they were leaving in an orderly fashion through several exits, with no sign of the usual jostle and rush.

Alma was at the end of the queue next to them, watching as Romeo placed the glowing bunny ears back on Arabella's head.

He whispered in her ear from time to time, their hands tightly interlocked, his adoring gaze as if it could hold no one but Arabella.

"The concert was totally worth it tonight! I never expected to see Summer, let alone hear her sing. Her voice is like a stream flowing from the mountains, and David's voice is like a breeze across the hills. Their voices together, it's the most beautiful duet I've ever heard!"
