

Arabella 1624

Chapter 1624

"David gave them to me before."

Never did she expect that David would show up in the same pair. It was all a coincidence, but to the fans online, it was proof positive they were an item.

Arabella scrolled through a list the fans had compiled, outlining the ten pieces of 'evidence' that they were dating. One point was about a fan noticing the way David looked at her while singing - full of adoration, his smile brimming with affection.

And then there were fans saying, [Do you know who Summer is? Big shots in the industry can't even invite her over, so how does David swing it? Because they've got to be dating, that's how! Otherwise, why would David spend an entire night clearing up rumors for her about lip-syncing and plagiarism. He's got no obligation! They've got to be hiding something!!]

Arabella was almost convinced by their deductions, especially when someone zoomed in on the in-ear monitor she wore while singing.

[I'm David's die-hard fan, and I recognize those in-ears! That's David's favorite set - the pair he treasures most! I can't believe he'd let Summer use them.]

[Their relationship must be pretty tight.]

She had been a last-minute replacement onstage and then there were the countless fans who swooned over that hug on stage, claiming it was the kind of embrace life and grace, they could only belong to a young girl, not some older to drop the mask and for her and David to go public with their that fame came with its baggage, "Thankfully, no one knows you're Summer and Summer is you.

Louisa peeled an egg for her daughter, she added, "David used to avoid coming hadn't realized David's fame came at such a cost, keeping him sent a message to Erik, eager to on Betty for updates wasn't enough - Erik was the family's butler, and since Martha left, he was the one chose her words carefully, hit send, and clutched her phone tightly, waiting. Soon after, the

this point, there's no use

Serena's heart sank as she read Erik's message. The vibe from her parents didn't seem warm.

[The skincare you bought for Mrs. Collins with your prize money, she's stopped using it. Instead, she's switched to the Ar-BI-Clear Group series gifted by Ms. Arabella. As you know, Ms. Arabella is the founder of the Ar-BI-Clear Group skincare line.]

Serena's fingernails dug into her palm. This news had even reached Erik. If he knew that Arabella was behind Ar-BI-Clear Group, then surely the lower servants were cozying up to Arabella, hoping she'd help them look more beautiful? Arabella must have been doling out skincare products to win them over.

Thinking this, Serena felt a surge of resentment towards Arabella's underhandedness.

[Also, the massage chair you got for Mr. Collins with your piano competition winnings, he used to love it, and had it in his room. Last night, it was moved to storage.]

[What are you saying? Why?] Serena was too shock to believe; she typed the message with trembling hands.

[Mr. Collins claimed the massage chair broke, saying it was uncomfortable and even gave off electric shocks. But I think it's because Ms. Arabella gave him a new one, and that's why the old one was discarded.]