

Arabella 1628

Chapter 1628

Delicate snowflakes danced down, settling gently onto a girl's long hair.

The girl was on her knees in the snow, her eyes red and swollen as if she had just finished crying.

Betty, startled by the sight, gasped, "Ms. Serena? What on earth are you doing kneeling out here?"

This was right at the main house's front steps, and she had left the guesthouse without permission. Did Mr. and Mrs. Collins know about this??

"What are you doing?" Betty, seeing Serena steadfast in her kneeling, noticed a long tree branch laid before her in the snow. Although confused, Betty uttered, "The ground's freezing, please get up."

Serena looked ahead with a blank expression, "Betty, go tell mom and dad that I found this branch. If they're still angry, they can use it to punish me until their anger abates."

Realizing she couldn't persuade Serena, Betty hurried inside to inform Kenneth and Louisa.

of professional photographs on her phone, discussing with her husband, "Kenneth, what do you think about hiring this photography team to take a family portrait for the holiday? Look at

could finish, Betty rushed in, recounting the that?" Louisa stood up, walking to the window and drawing back the curtains, only to see Serena kneeling in the was roughed up by someone at our doorstep a few days ago, bitten by a snake, then she took a fall, and ended up with a fever and a cold.

shift, standing by the window

as well. She looked especially pitiable, wrapped in a fleece nightgown, her hair cascading over her shoulders. But outside, in the icy world covered in had always been

Serena's voice broke through the snowy silence, laden with sobs, "I shouldn't have spoken ill of Bella behind her back, shouldn't have let you down. I know saying sorry a thousand times won't make up for the hurt garden, two servants had never imagined Serena would end up in such a state. Even they were bundled up in thick coats and warm gloves, while blanket of snow, her pale face looked

"I heard she badmouthed Ms. Arabella in front of her friends and was sent by Mr. and Mrs. Collins to the next building to reflect."

"When she was sent away, she was bruised and battered, then she got sick, and Mr. and Mrs. Collins didn't even spare her a glance."

"I always thought she got along well with Ms. Arabella; never imagined she would do such a thing."

"But aren't Mr. and Mrs. Collins's punishment too harsh? They didn't visit her when she was injured, didn't care for her when she was sick, and now that she's kneeling out there, they haven't come out to see her right away."

"Serena has always lived a life of luxury; I've never seen her kneel so miserably like this. I do hope Mr. and Mrs. Collins gives her a chance; she looks so pitiful."

"Ms. Arabella is the real jewel of this family. Serena mistreating her is like openly disrespecting Mr. and Mrs. Collins, isn't it?"

"Dad, Mom, Bella. I'm sorry!!" Serena cried out, tears streaming down her face, "I truly am!!"