

Arabella 1632

Chapter 1632

Hearing her mother addressed it was horrifying, Serena's tears cascaded down her cheeks, "I was just blabbering. I had no idea Bella is Summer. People say whatever they want online. I was just spouting nonsense. Mom, you have to believe me; you might not trust me on anything else, but on this, I really am innocent!"

Louisa watched her sobbing and was utterly unmoved, her voice icy as she said, "Wait until Bella gets back, you apologize to her in front of the whole family then you can pack your bags and leave."

Serena gazed blankly at Louisa, her mother who used to cherish her and now was ready to cast her out. Not just cast her out, but demand an apology to Arabella before leaving, and in front of the whole family?

The whole family? Including Grandma and Grandpa, her aunt and uncle? Was she trying to strip her of her dignity completely?

"Mom, you're throwing me out? You don't want me anymore?" Serena's voice quivered as if bleeding, "You once said, no matter what happens, I'll always be your princess; you said even if my sister came back to this home, you'd treat us equally; you promised to watch me walk down the aisle in a wedding dress."

"And now you have the nerve to say these things to me?" Louisa snapped, "You've brought this all on yourself!"

behind their backs. Caught a couple of times, she'd only pretend to be weak, frail to pick up that branch over there, collapsing on the ground? How come now lunged to cling to her feet, nearly causing her to stumble. Had Kenneth not been there to catch her in told me, and I swear to God, I really to listen supposed to go? This is my home; you core. If Serena had just come clean, as a mother, she wouldn't feel as disappointed as "I said let go."

"I won't let, ahem."

"Mom, you'll always be my mom. You can hit me, scold me, punish me however you like; just "What are you waiting for? Pull her off!" Louisa's cold gaze fell on Betty.

Betty hurriedly pulled Serena away, "Ms. Serena, holding onto Mrs. Collins like that is making her uncomfortable; if you have something to say, say it properly later."

"Let me go, let go," Serena couldn't believe this fool was holding her back at a time like this, not even trying to plead on her behalf, just pulling at her.

Louisa turned and walked away, her figure resolute and detached.

"Serena, you've truly broken both of our hearts; you're such a disappointment," Kenneth dropped these words and followed Louisa into the main house.

With the door closing mercilessly behind them, Serena crawled forward a few steps, "Dad, Mom."