

Arabella 1705

Chapter 1705

"Isn't she pretty?"

"More than that, she's got it all."

"I've never heard you rave about a girl like this before. I've gotta see her for myself one day. But, you know, I've recently met a girl who's pretty unique too."

Derrick looked like he was on cloud nine, having a spring in his step.

"What's so special about her?" Timothy wished for nothing more than for Derrick's entire attention to be on this topic.

"Why don't we go inside and grab a seat?" Derrick suggested, and turned to Romeo, "Weren't you going to introduce us to your fiancée? Don't you need to pick her up?"

"She's already here." Romeo teased, "You said the girl you met is really special, stunning, right?"

"Absolutely, I can guarantee you've never come across anyone as breathtaking in all your twenty-something years."

it – the only woman who had ever in the

had ever dazzled him was Romeo's fiancée, the woman he loved her job?" Derrick held the door to the coffee shop open for them to enter, grinning ear to ear, "You'll never Celebrity?" Timothy blurted

table by the window. When his gaze met Arabella's, he thought, what a coincidence.

way to her hand on the girl's waist. What had he just said – this girl

the sound of his

too. The girl's last

– the same last name as Serena

in the world named Collins, and considering she'd raced with Sean's

Besides, he had attended several Collins family banquets, but had never seen a girl as striking as her.

It's probably just a coincidence..

"Hello," Arabella greeted Derrick warmly.

"So, is Arabella Collins your real name? Nice to meet you."

Hearing Derrick's comment, both Romeo and Timothy blurted out, "She has another name?"

Derrick was momentarily confused by their questions, "Dr. Bell, that's her, right?"

Arabella was taken aback; how did he know about her other identity?

"I saw you at my hospital saving a life yesterday." Derrick explained, "At first, I was puzzled at how there could be such a young lead surgeon, until someone mentioned Dr. Bell."