

Arabella 1700

Chapter 1700

A gentle kiss landed on Arabella's forehead, swiftly followed by another on her lips.

Romeo's voice, laced with a teasing whine and a seductive timbre, carried with it his unmistakable air of dominance as it enveloped her.

Arabella found herself lifted off her feet.

The door shut behind them, and Romeo, cradling her in his arms, walked deeper into the room, placing her gently on the sofa for another kiss.

The scent of her fresh shower lingered on her skin, making him almost lose control.

Arabella vaguely felt her back pressing against something, "Wait a sec."

Romeo forced himself to pause, seeing her pull out a small gift bag.

It was a trinket he had picked up from a quaint shop in Dawnstar, something he had been carrying around until now, having forgotten to set it aside in the heat of the moment.

"This is for you," Romeo's voice still dripped with affection.

found a pale blue gemstone, seemingly of significant grab it," Romeo explained, tucking a stray lock of her hair behind her

me stuff

you." He kissed her lips once more and asking, "Would you have room for me tonight? I've got room here if

just one bedroom, one living room, and there be calculations, Arabella couldn't help but from you. If you'd let me, I could just lay out a sleeping bag next to your bed. That way, if you roll

your dreams," Arabella he broached, "I've got two mates here in Belloria. They're available tomorrow, and one side, his fiancée on the other—Romeo was full of anticipation at the thought of them to see just how remarkable his fiancée

at Rick's Café tomorrow. Someone has helped me bring them there. What time's your

"Two in the afternoon."

"Perfect, I'll set it for three." Romeo whipped out his phone and texted his friends.

At that very moment, Timothy couldn't believe the coincidence. It was also at Rick's Café, but at two, that he'd planned a date with the girl he was smitten with!

If he and the girl were still there at three when Romeo and Derrick arrived, they'd get to see just how stunning her girl was!

Buzzing with excitement, he eventually calmed down, deciding to keep the coffee date a secret from his buddies for now. He wanted to surprise them! When they saw her with their own eyes, they'd understand why he was so taken with her.

Content with his plans, he fell asleep.

The following afternoon, Romeo and Arabella arrived at Rick's Café ahead of time.

The café was a well-known spot in Belloria, boasting a spacious and beautiful setting. From the window seat, one could enjoy the seaside view and admire the grand Ferris wheel in the distance.

"What coffee would you like?" Romeo asked Arabella softly.

He knew her usual choice, but wondered if she'd opt for something different.

"I'm good with anything," Arabella casually replied. She was easy-going with food and drinks.