

Arabella 381

Chapter 381

“Serena’s test scores were really something this time,” the professor from Summerfield College said with a satisfied smile. “But we’re actually here to see Arabella.” “Arabella?” Kenneth and Louisa both looked surprised.

The rest of the servants also showed surprise.

Serena’s hands clenched involuntarily, trying to keep her cool.

“She’s the one who aced the test!”

Everyone was stunned. A perfect score?

Serena’s face turned pale instantly as if she’d been struck by lightning, ready to collapse any second.

How could Arabella possibly get a perfect score?

Serena’s mood changed when she saw the messages in the group chat!

She had been brimming with confidence, thinking her rise to fame was approaching.

She had been looking forward to seeing her name on news headlines, trending topics on social media, and all major Internet platforms.

She had been eager to receive countless compliments in the comments section of the web.

She thought she was about to be the talk of the town.

But reality had a cruel way of surprising her when a straight-A student came out of nowhere and stole all her thunder.

“Holy moly!” Martha suddenly had an idea, hurriedly took out her phone, and started making calls.

Serena was too down in the dumps to inquire about it, but Martha’s words made her look up in surprise, “Martha, you didn’t invite reporters, did you?”

But Arabella was different. She was the only one to score full marks in the past seven years. The last one was Romeo, who aced the entrance exam at 15!

It had been seven years since anyone else had gotten full marks in the country!

And today, this honour was claimed by this girl.

The device was a big ticket item that the principal splurged on just to lure Arabella into applying for his school!

He shelled out five hundred million dollars!

The device was perched in his school, with only two of its kind worldwide, one in the National Research Institute of M Country and the other in his school!

This device could be a game changer, bringing about colossal transformations in drug research!

Arabella gave a smile. The principal sure had some tricks up his sleeve, knowing exactly what she needed.

“The principal mentioned, apart from the H30, he’s also stocked up on other rare equipment in the school lab for you to use whenever you fancy! Plus, he’s thrown in another deal!”

Everyone was all ears. What was the deal this time? Arabella seemed quite keen on the previous one.

“You were all cocksure when you made the bet. Now you’re not gonna try to weasel out of it, are you? Edith said with feigned boredom. “If that’s the case, it’d be such a killjoy We won’t be betting with you anymore”

“You guys bet that big?” Louisa didn’t give a hoot, thinking they were just joking around. They’ve had little wagers among the servants before, all for fun.

“Martha, you always play favourites with Serena Did you think about the consequences of making such a big bet?” Louisa chuckled. “Arabella and Serena are both daughters of this house You can’t be biased You going to be fair to everyone!”

Martha smiled awkwardly, “Alright, I’ll go get the cloth now, Ms Bella. Please wait a moment”

When she turned around, she was seething inside, muttering under her breath about what a chatterbox Edith was, so annoying!

Arabella raised an eyebrow slightly If this servant wanted to shine shoes, she’d let her shine alright.

Arabella smiled faintly and replied, “I haven’t decided yet.”

“Wherever you choose to live, come home on the weekends if you have time! Otherwise, I’ll miss you!” Kenneth said this, then turned to Serena, “Serena, I haven’t asked you yet. Which school do you want to apply to?”

Serena felt incredibly aggrieved. Her parents had ignored her for a while, and now they suddenly remembered her.

Suppressing her inner grief, she said calmly, “The cut-off score for Summerfield College has been over 700 in the past. If I apply, I should have a good chance.” Even though Summerfield College was the school that Arabella didn't want to go to, Westerly College was also the one she, Serena, wouldn't touch with a ten-foot pole!!

"So you plan to apply to Summerfield College?" Kenneth said with a benevolent smile, "Summerfield College is great. It's close to Westerly College. You two can look out for each other in the future."

Arabella thought to herself "Why would I look out for her?"

Serena also thought "They make it sound like I need her to look out for me!!"

"Ms Bella, do you think the shoes I shined are clean?" Martha asked with a smile.

Chapter 386

Arabella looked at the shoes and said, "Not too shabby"

"So. Ive fulfilled the bet Martha stood up, ready to leave

"Don't forget and you re on cleaning duty today! Thanks to Martha, we all get a day off Edith said with a chuckle, quickly adding, "We appreciate it, Martha!"

The other servants joined in laughing and thanking her, "We appreciate it, Martha Martha swallowed her anger and responded with a smile, "Not a big deal. I'm fine with the outcome of the bet

Suddenly, a servant rushed in, "There's a swarm of reporters outside. They heard our girl came in first, and they all want to interview Ms. Bella!"

"What did you tell them? Kenneth asked anxiously.

exams would choose Summerfield College or

Even if she's excellent in medicine, she would end up working for someone else, being a doctor, and working long hours. What's the point?

Better to go to Summerfield College or Helgen College, and whether she found a job or not, she would be a top-tier graduate.

Edith was passing by the garden when she saw Martha watering the flowers.

She couldn't help but stop and sneer, "Watering the flowers, are you? Why don't you dig a hole while you're at it?"

Martha looked up, puzzled by her words.

"You said earlier, we've got two students in this house, one came in first, and the other did terribly. That's quite a difference! You said if the one who did badly were you, you'd rather dig a hole in the garden, crawl in, and die than shame yourself publicly."

"You!!" Martha was taken aback that she remembered and came just to taunt her, her face flushed with anger.

"Why don't you start digging a hole for your Serena? With such a huge gap, how can you stand it according to your own words? Get to it!"

Chapter 387

You, you just wait, I'm going right now to tell the lady of the house that you want Serena dead!" Martha was gearing up to go tattle.

Edith burst into laughter, "Go ahead Those are your own words, all the household staff can vouch for it! If anyone cursed first, it was you, who cursed at Ms. Bella! I just retaliated! I had a reason!"

"You're the one who came up with this scheme to frame her, what else could I do?"

Martha could not stand it anymore and shouted, "Enough! Do you really think I'm powerless against you?"

"I'm curious, what sneaky plan do you have up your sleeve now? Frame me? Or cause trouble for Ms. Bella? Don't forget the video of you trying to cause Ms. Bella to slip is still with her!"

At the mention of this, Martha became a little uncomfortable and remained silent, but still in anger.

"I'll get the video from Ms. Bella later, if you dare to mock or bully her in public again, I will show the video to the lady and see who gets thrown out of this house first Martha was so angry she could not speak. She had hired Edith, Edith was her subordinate, but afterwards, she had become very arrogant. Standing up to her over of Arabella Bennett?

Was she revolting?

Chapter 388

In no time, the topic “Arabella Scores Perfect on Exam” shot up to the top spot on the trending tab.

Arabella returned to her room and found a bunch of unread messages on her phone. She responded to Romeo McMillian first.

“I had a visit from a professor at Summerfield College earlier, but I’ve decided on Westerly College.”

Romeo quickly gave her a call, his voice filled with surprise and affection. “Was that perfect score in the exam yours?”

Arabella raised an eyebrow. “News travels fast, huh?” she thought.

The reporters had left less than ten minutes ago, and the news was already everywhere.

“You’re awesome, Bella.” Romeo praised sincerely.

Arabella smiled, “You’re not half bad yourself.”

Romeo was taken aback. So, did

Arabella know all along that he was the perfect scorer from seven years ago? Had she looked it up, or had she noticed back then? “Westerly College is a good choice, it’s close to me.” Romeo replied with a chuckle, “I like watching you save people. You look so serious, so beautiful.”

Arabella flashed a smile, "Thanks. I was just doing my thing."

Her teacher knew she had always been a brainiac. In the mock exams back at school, she'd ace all the short answers, only avoiding essay writing and long responses.

But this time, she had to tackle the essays and long answers, so it was not surprising that she got a perfect score.

"I know," her teacher said. "If the total score was a thousand, you'd still ace it! You're one smart cookie and I'm sure you'll do great things in the future. Maybe the principal will ask you to give a speech at school to motivate other students. I hope you'd agree to it."

"Certainly."

After answering her teacher, Arabella received a news notification. Her story was blowing up online. Underneath the news, loads of people were dropping comments. There were over 300k comments.

President Tanner said, "Unfair."

President Mann said, "Shameless."

President Nelson said, "Lowbrow"

President Charles said, "Scummy"

As they all huffed and puffed, President Barton was in high spirits. He sipped the coffee Arabella had bought for him, hummed a tune, and enjoyed himself immensely.

Meanwhile, an elderly professor strolled onto the campus of Summerfield College and knocked on the principal's office door.

"Come in."
