

Life Debt 1011

Chapter 1011

Jay suddenly said, "You won't get fat in a day." "You're a riot. I'm going to be a pound heavier tomorrow, with half of it on my cheeks and the other half on my waist..."

Zoe closed her eyes, stopping herself from imagining the sight. "You were watching me eat, Jay! Why didn't you remind me of the so-called actress' self-discipline?!"

"You told me not to remind you."

Zoe was speechless.

With friends like these, who needed enemies?!

She slammed her fork and knife on the table right then and left the table.

Jay certainly knew that she was already making a run for the body weight scale in the room.

Soon, they heard the blood-curdling scream from the room.

In reality, she would at most have gained a quarter of a pound...

"Jay, I guess you should eat more." Clara gestured at Jay just then, used to Zoe's obsession with weight.

"Okay," Jay replied and kept eating.

Zoe was a little miffed.

Was Jay that susceptible to her presence?

She really wondered just then how he remained so calm whenever she put the moves on him back at Levine Manor.

These days, it was like he flared up the instant she looked his way!

She slid her dainty hands against his bare skin just then, but he caught her." Get some sleep soon. It's a long journey tomorrow."

"But... we can't do it once we leave tomorrow."

Whether there were cameras in their room tomorrow night, they were still doing a recording away from home.

There certainly was no way they could get frisky, ignoring the presence of the entire production crew, right?

Jay began, "Zoe-"

Zoe cut him short right then. "I repulse you, right?"

Jay did a double take. "I thought it's the other way around."

Zoe asked in exhaustion, "What time is it?"
Did they not have a recording today?!
"It's still early. You can sleep a little longer if you're sleepy."
"But can we make it?" Zoe pressed, unable to open her eyes wide and actually intending to sleep in.
"Yeah."

"Okay. I'm sleeping a little longer," Zoe said and tossed around.

Even that took considerable effort, and she made a mental note not to tease Jay from now on.

Honestly, she should not even touch him or the consequences would be too severe!

However, she stiffened right then-even as she turned her back toward Jay, he gathered her in his arms from behind with a bear hug.

Still, he said, "Don't worry. I'm holding back."

Zoe promptly tapped on the article, which briefly described their family of three going out on a playdate.

There were some exaggerated parts here and there but nothing malicious.

She then scrolled through the comments.

[Can I just say that this is so sweet it hurts? I’m so jealous...]

[Jay Parker usually looks so reserved and aloof, but there’s no hiding it when you’re in love.]

(How could anyone look that good? They really deserve each other.)

[Oh, I think I believe in love again now...]

[This public display of affection caught me off guard, but I approve!]

Zoe scrolled through a huge portion of the comments, but most of them were nice.

At least there was nothing like ‘hurting public morals’, ‘society these days’, or ‘family unfriendly’.

She decided to be more careful when they were out in public next time around.

However, she realized that it was not even her fault after some thought-it was clearly Jay’s.

Zoe quickly washed up and got changed before leaving the house with Jay.

He brought her some low-fat food, and she asked worriedly, ‘Are we really not going to affect recording progress?’”

She was really afraid of getting scandalized, since she still wanted to stay in showbiz.

‘ Well be fine. Don’t worry.”

' Alright," Zoe said, telling herself to trust Jay as well.

He had never broken a promise before, after all.

Later, Zoe finally found out how Jay could be so direct.

The lettuce was certainly heavy, but Zoe started looking for the next vegetable on the inventory.

She had never seen actual eggplants in farms before, but she at least knew that they were purple.

It was too distinct a trait, so she found them immediately and plucked two.

And then, it was the bell peppers...

' Bell peppers, so peppers that look like bells? I guess I just have to find something similar... Okay, got it!"

Zoe started to get a little excited just then.

She suddenly wanted to praise herself for her intelligence-she never felt as smart as this!

Once she was done with the bell peppers, she started to look for giant cabbages.

"This one should be easy. Since it's 'giant', I just have to find the biggest vegetable in the farm," Zoe said, though she had to move to another part of the farm to pull out the cabbage.

Zoe knew it-she had been celebrating too early.
Jay's upbringing was even more refined than hers, and he would never know his vegetables.
"You don't know?" she asked nonetheless, refusing to give in.
'Ko-ree-an-duh," Jay suddenly replied.
"Not 'corry-under'?" Zoe exclaimed.
Jay smiled visibly and adoringly just then. "Pretty sure it isn't."
"Are you sure?"
"Yep."
"You're sure I won't end up on a clip where I'm flamed for being an insult to mandatory schooling?"

Jay's smile broadened. "You're being paranoid. Not many would use ' coriander* anyway-you can check the live comments when the episode is broadcasted too. I bet you that eight percent of average netizens wont even spell it right."

"That makes me a little more confident, but do you actually know what it is?" Zoe asked. "I'm more concerned about not getting ingredients for dinner than being flamed."

Cora said, "Me too."

But in reality, she knew all her vegetables.

She was the one who lived with Clara as a child and went through all manner of sufferings, from washing clothes by hand to cooking.

It hurt her to think of her painful childhood in contrast to Zoe's.

However, she forced herself not to show it.

Nonetheless, as they strode along the farm together, they were startled to find something dashing through the fields.

It was a huge black dog, and it was running straight for them!

Chapter 1020

Neither Zoe nor Cora could stop themselves from crying out loud.

However, while Jay was holding Zoe's hand firmly as if he would rather be the one hurting, Bob was staring at their direction too when he heard Zoe's cry.

In fact, his eyes were still fixed on Zoe even though he was standing beside Cora, who kept crying out from the pain.

Eventually, she had enough and called out to him quietly, "Bob."

Bob turned toward her and asked in concern, "Does it hurt? Zoe was screaming murder there.'

Cora did not answer, but her gaze darkened further.

After Cora and Zoe's bite wounds were disinfected and bandaged, they were given a rabies shot and admitted for further observation just in case.

If nothing happened, they could return to North City, where they would have another shot to complete the vaccination.

Both Zoe and Cora were staying in VVIP wards, and they did not have to worry about the presence of intruders.
