She flawlessly carried her role and it's almost as if she exceeded all expectations!"

"Allow me to whisper this secret: her performance outshone Eulalia Diaz's!"

"They don't even belong in the same league. What was Eulalia Diaz even attempting... Near lifeless, yet continuing to feign affection before Mr. Miller, I'm left utterly speechless!"

Upon hearing the director's call for a cut, Hannah promptly rose and gracefully acknowledged the crew, stating, "I apologize for the inconvenience, everyone."

Pierson seemed transfixed by the scene, his gaze lingering on Hannah's radiant profile.

"Why are you hesitating? The director is beckoning us."

It was only when Hannah addressed him that Pierson snapped back to reality, hastening to follow her.

"You claimed to have no prior acting experience but it's truly hard to believe!"

Director Fowler regarded Hannah with a pleasantly surprised expression, inquiring, "You've genuinely never received formal acting training?"

Hannah shook her head with an infectious smile, replying, "I genuinely haven't. My educational background is in clinical medicine."

"She's an undiscovered jewel!"

Director Fowler was suddenly imbued with a fervor to introduce Hannah to the industry, exclaiming, "I believe you possess a natural aptitude for acting. Fortuitously, I have a well-connected investor in mind; I'll make the introduction."

"No... There's no need, Director Fowler. I..."

Hannah stood on the precipice of articulating her disinterest in venturing into the entertainment realm when an unmistakable voice punctuated her thoughts.

"Hannah."

Turning to the source, Hannah met Bryson's gaze with a modicum of astonishment.

"Mr. Mitchell? What brings you here?"

Director Fowler, momentarily confounded, surveyed the two of them.

"You're acquainted?"

Bryson nonchalantly affirmed, "She's a friend of mine."

"What an unforeseen coincidence!"

Director Fowler, with an amiable grin, redirected his attention to Hannah.

“This is the investor I alluded to, with whom I’ve had the privilege of collaborating. Mr. Mitchell, your friend here is nothing short of extraordinary. She’s done me an immense service! Without any formal acting training, her performance was nothing short of remarkable—a true serendipity!”

Bryson, regarding Hannah with an affectionate smile, concurred, “She excels in every aspect.”
