

Never Say 419

“You!” Valery’s face flushed with anger.

“Valery! How could you speak to your sister in that manner?”

Wyatt’s expression soured. He turned towards Hannah and attempted to downplay the situation.

“Your sister made a mistake, but we’ve set her straight. Let’s not bring it up again.”

Julissa chimed in with a comforting grin, “Yes, your sister was naive and fell into a bad deal. We’ve corrected her. She won’t make that mistake again.”

Hannah didn’t buy a word they said.

She turned her gaze to Rocco, who remained silent across the table, his eyes locked onto hers.

Rocco averted his gaze when he noticed her looking.

Not missing a beat, Wyatt cut to the chase.

“Since you’ve divorced Declan, you’re free to leave Valmere. Return to Hoijery with me and join my business.”

“Your business?”

Angela’s Library

A smirk tugging at her lips, Hannah gazed at Wyatt and asked, “I’ve heard your business is struggling with finances. Would you even be able to pay me if I joined?”

At her words, Wyatt’s expression shifted. Julissa quickly grasped his hand and reassured Hannah, smiling, “Dear Hannah, don’t believe the rumors. Our company is thriving. It’s just cutthroat competition out there.”

“Why do you think you can address me as dear Hannah? Are we that close?”

Hannah’s voice turned icy as she continued, “The only reason I’m at this event is to get Rocco back. Stop harboring any illusions about me. I have no intention of returning with you!”

Wyatt’s hand crashed down on the table as he shot up, his voice tinged with anger.

“You still haven’t explained why you sent your sister to the police! You can’t dodge this arrangement!”

“So you think I have no say in this?”

Hannah also stood up, locking eyes with Wyatt.

“I’m telling you, Rocco is leaving with me today. Dare to stop me, and see what happens. Come on, Rocco.”

Rocco began wheeling himself in Hannah’s direction, only for Wyatt to seize him abruptly.

“Hannah! Don’t get too confident! The Moore family isn’t powerless against you. Remember, your grandfather still resides in Hoijery.”

Don't you want to visit him?"

"Don't you dare use my grandfather as a pawn!"