Chapter 251

“Do you still want to drink?” Zoe asked, looking at the bottles all over the floor.

She knew John could hold his alcohol well, but she didn't agree at how desperate he was drinking right now.

Besides, her head hurt a lot.

She wasn't sure if it was because she hadn't rested well, but she knew if she kept going, she was going to get drunk soon.

“I'm waiting...” John replied.

“For who?*

“The driver.”

It took Zoe a moment to remember that they had both been drinking, and that they had driven here in Cordy's car.

Seriously. Even when he was pissed drunk, John remained somewhat sober. Zoe wasn't sure if it was a good thing or not.

The good thing was that rational people generally didn't make mistakes.

The bad thing was that it was tough for people like this to vent and relax.

After Jay released Zoe, he didn’t linger any longer and went directly to John.

“Can you walk on your own?”

It was clear to him John had been drinking a lot.

“Yeah.”

“Let’s go,” Jay said.

John stood, then swayed a little. Jay eventually had to assist him and help him to the passenger side of the car as Zoe followed behind. While she was considering if she should also get into the car, Jay said, “Johnny mentioned that this car is Cordy’s. I’ll send you back since I have to return the car.”

So, Zoe got into the back seat.

The car ride was smooth. Even though it was late at night and there were scarcely any cars on the road, Jay drove slowly.

He had always been a gentle person.

Perhaps because he was living by relying on someone else's charity, she hardly ever saw him lose his temper. Zoe was also unsure which part of him attracted couldn't even remember the reason

"It's fine, since..." Cordy trailed off, then continued, "Could you bring her in?" 1

Jay didn't ask anything further and simply followed Cordy through the house, then placed Zoe in Cordy's bed. From the start to the end, Zoe hadn't moved a

After releasing her, Jay left Cordy's room with the latter following him.

When they reached the living room, Jay handed her the medicine John had Cordy was stunned.

Jay explained, "Johnny asked me to give you this."

Cordy pursed her lips but said nothing. There was a dark bruise on her neck from when Bryson held her tonight. She hadn't thought that John had noticed.

"Thank you," Cordy said, accepting it.

Zoe wasn't with Cordy in person, but she could practically feel how packed and busy Cordy was.

Zoe let out a long sigh.

Perhaps work was able to make Cordy forget about the upsetting things that were going on. She had been this way since back then. She hardly ever stopped to breathe since the start of her career.

Cordy put away her phone and headed to the conference room. The meeting today was to discuss the bidding, and the afternoon was to be spent looking at the creation of a new brand.

For a business to continue to grow, it must be continuously innovative.

When the meeting ended, it was time to get off work. However, Cordy stayed in the office and continued to process the many internal requests she had in hand.

As she continued her work silently, her phone started ringing.

She glanced at it, then pressed the button to reject the call. After a while, her phone rang again. This time, it was an unfamiliar number calling.

She hesitated for a moment before answering, "Hello?"

Cordy didn't think she would actually pass out. Even though she had been up almost the entire night and had overworked herself, she still thought she could endure it.

However, she fainted in front of Kyle, of all people.

The moment she collapsed, a bad feeling washed over her.

Zoe was waiting at home for Cordy to return from work. She had rescheduled all her work today and ordered a very nutritious meal from the best private chef in Zoe didn't know why her heart ached so much when she saw Cordy in this state.

Cordy was clearly a strong woman, tougher and more beautiful than Zoe. Yet, she was ill-fated. As the saying goes, the more beautiful you are, the more miserable your life is.

At Levine Ventures' General Manager office, John had hung up the call with Zoe and immediately dialed another number. "Jay, could you ask Mandy if Kyle is at home?"

"What's wrong?"

"Once you know, just text me. I only want to know the answer to that question,'
John said urgently before hanging up the phone.

Then, he dialed another number. "Search through all the cameras in the city

Kyle was enjoying himself so much. He smiled wickedly and said, "Do you regret how you treated me? I begged you. I even bowed and groveled for a chance to work with you, but you showed me no mercy! Do you regret it now?"

"The only regret I have is loving you!" Cordy hissed as she met Kyle's eyes with her icy ones. "It makes me sick to think about that. I feel like throwing up!"

"Don't bother trying to drive a wedge between me and Noel."

"Well then, why are the Sachs standing idly by while Jessop Corp is in crisis? If Noel loves you so much, why doesn't she get them to give you the capital injection you need?" Cordy shot back.

"Your father Simon's the one who's being too materialistic. Noel even argued with him to try and help me/ Kyle retorted.

"Oh? Is that so?" Cordy asked. "And has the outcome changed at all?"

"How could Noel possibly have the power to change Simon's mind?"

"Kyle, I have to say... You wouldn't have fallen into such ruin if you hadn't met Noel in this lifetime."

"Cordy!" Kyle was humiliated by her sarcasm.

Cordy felt the pill enter her mouth, but she refused to swallow. It was something Kyle gave her, so it couldn't be anything good.

The two of them were in a stalemate for a while.

Kyle covered Cordy's nose, and the sudden choking sensation that washed over her forced her to open her mouth. At the same time, Kyle grabbed the mineral water next to her and poured it forcefully into her mouth.

Since her nose was covered, she was unable to stop her body's instincts and swallowed the white pill that washed down her throat with the water.

The most wicked smile broke out on Kyle's face. "Do you want to know what you just took?"

Cordy glared at him with cold, hard eyes.

Only hate remained in them.

"I thought I'd never see any other emotions in your eyes even if you died, you know? Do you know how much I love that look on your face? I was really sick of how indifferent you looked all the time!" Kyle hissed through clenched teeth. "I gave you an aphrodisiac. Soon, you'll feel like dying from overwhelming desire and lust!"

Gradually, Cordy’s face started to feel hotter, and sweat broke out on her forehead.

The drug was kicking in.

Kyle kept his eyes on Cordy and watched as her body reacted with satisfaction.

Cordy’s vision began to blur no matter how hard she tried to resist the feeling.

Her struggles were to no avail.
