

The Revived Me Surrounded by Adoration as a Supporting Role by Dedaul Chapter 10 -

Chapter 10 Discrimination

The meaning in Sophie's eyes was obvious,

Shane became angry.

"Ms. Mercer, you're the one who wanted this student. If you don't take good care of her, you can just leave.

Sophie was a new teacher who had just entered the school this year, and there were obviously better teachers.

But only she was hired in the end.

Shane left the matter of recruiting teachers to Wilson.

It was true that he was about to retire.

But just because he was about to retire didn't mean that Wilson was in charge of this school.

The day before yesterday, Reese called Shane and said he wanted to send his child to Shane's school.

Shane said okay without hesitation.

But when he gave Wilson Valerie's information, he didn't state that Valerie was one of the Horton family. Shane just gave some basic information.

Since he wanted to lure his target into the trap, he had to arrange everything in advance.

However, this kid...

Shane recruited the Horton family's kid for his own plan.

He had thought the Horton family's kid would look noble, so the other people would not dare to look down on her.

But after seeing Valerie and the communication between her and Kieran today, Shane was worried.

He frowned slightly.

Shane thought, "Has the Horton family run out of money?

They can't even afford to raise a child?"

He was puzzled.

Meanwhile, Sophie led Valerie toward the classroom.

She strutted forward, her high heels hitting the ground.

Valerie could only trot behind her.

Every now and then, Sophie turned around and looked at the backpack on Valerie's back.

A pang of contempt ran through her heart.

Sophie snorted.

She thought, "What a vain family!

They can't afford to buy the latest clothes for her, but this backpack is the latest model.

This bag will definitely follow her for six years."

Sophie regretted it so much.

In Capstead, there are so many people surnamed Horton. She didn't think she would be so lucky to meet the child of the Horton family.

She was so enthusiastic yesterday and let Wilson secretly help her.

Today after work, Sophie had to go to the hotel with him.

She clicked her tongue in disgust.

Every time after sleeping with Wilson, she had to wash herself and vomit several times.

He was so disgusting and had a strong body odor.

Sophie wanted to get in with the students' families.

Otherwise, how would she have an affair with someone like Wilson?

She felt especially upset.

Turning her head impatiently, she looked at Valerie, who was trotting to keep up with her.

Sophie vented all her anger on this little girl.

"Walk faster! You're walking so slowly. Tell your parents to buy you better shoes. How can you walk fast in such worn-out shoes? How poor is your family? Do your parents not even know their places clearly?"

Valerie looked up in shock at the teacher who was verbally attacking her student.

Valerie thought, "What a rude teacher!"

Is this place unmonitored? She's so arrogant.”

It was true that there were no surveillance cameras here.

To give the children an independent space, there were no surveillance cameras that would invade privacy in the entire fancy school.

Even the stores inside the school had no such things.

The students all lined up to pay the bills.

It was because there were no surveillance cameras that Sophie was so bold.

Ordinary kids would be a bit angry if they heard such words.

But Sophie taunted the wrong people.

Valerie, who was trying to cut all ties with the Horton family in this life, chose to ignore Sophie's mockery of her parents.

Valerie even found it a little funny.

It was true that Reese and Reyna didn't pay attention to her or care much about Valerie, but the Horton family was the top family in Capstead.

Sophie said Valerie's family was poor.

If so, there would be no rich ones in Capstead or even in Zillyvoma.

Seeing Valerie expressionlessly accept her mockery, Sophie was pleased.

Sophie thought, “This is the way it should be. Students just can't refute their teachers' words.”

She was in a slightly better mood, grunting coldly.

She led Valerie onward.

The luxurious classrooms appeared in Valerie's sight.

In addition to the regular classrooms here, there were baking classrooms, cooking classrooms, foreign language classrooms, music classrooms, recording classrooms, and painting classrooms...

When they walked to a

to see a riding stable.

lley Valerie looked out and was surprised

The upperclassmen were now taking an equestrian lesson.

Valerie's eyes widened.

This was a place she couldn't reach in her last life.

She was born into a wealthy family, but she lived a humble life.

In this life, maybe due to the butterfly effect, Reese and Kieran sent Valerie to school.

But the tuition fees were too high.

It cost 100 thousand dollars a year.

Valerie threw this matter out of her mind.

She would not forget it. When she earned money later, she would save up money and return it to them.

They arrived at the classroom soon.

Sophie, who had just been cranky as hell, immediately adjusted her mood.

Turning her head to Valerie, Sophie gave a fake smile.

"Here we are, Valerie."

Sophie pushed open the heavy mahogany door.

The noise in the classroom stimulated Valerie's ears.

The students were playing and shouting. There were even small groups.

Almost all the girls surrounded a girl with long hair.

Valerie didn't see her clearly before the girl ran to the back row and sat quietly

Seeing Sophie, the kids sat back down.

But they still turned their heads and chatted with each other.

They didn't take Sophie seriously at all.

Even so, Sophie smiled at them.

"Everyone, we have a new classmate today. Let's welcome her."

This news made them stop chatting and look at the door with curious eyes.

"A new student came?"

"How could it be? My dad said it was hard to enter this school. One has to apply a year in advance to become a first grader here."

"Who's that? She's so powerful."

These were the children of Capstead's powerful families.

At a young age, they had learned a lot from their families.

They were high and mighty.

They were just a part of the students. The other part was the opposite of them

They had strict family rules, and they had been forced to learn a lot of things since kindergarten. They were well-taught.

They hated those classmates who looked down on others.

After Valerie appeared in the class, the situation became funny.

Half of the students there laughed at Valerie.

The other half applauded with seriousness.

They were welcoming Valerie to the class.

It was Valerie's first day in this class.

She got a little vexed.

Sophie was mean, and the atmosphere of this class was not harmonious at all

Valerie thought, "Is this the so-called fancy school?"
