

Arabella 2010

Chapter 2010

[Yeah, I mean, most folks would've passed out cold at the sight of all that blood. But Arabella, her face, her reaction, she was just too calm.]

[The thing is, no matter what complications came up during surgery, she handled them like a pro, as if it was all just child's play to her.]

[The doctors, they treated her with so much respect. Her skills must've really impressed them, earned their admiration.]

[So, are you saying she's like a miracle worker?]

[The patient was clearly cured, so why are there rumors that he died because of her? What's the real story?]

[I can't imagine the Collins family would just cram Arabella with medical jargon and procedures for the sake of a title. Those doctors were in a rush to save a life, they wouldn't just play along with a charade. I believe in their professional integrity.]

[Then who the heck took that video of the family crying outside the OR, claiming Arabella botched the surgery? Who's trying to smear her name?]

It didn't take long for netizens to dig up the identity of the filmer – a guy named Algernon.

[Algernon? Who's that?]

[He's not a reporter, so what's he doing lurking around the hospital, filming stuff? Trying to hurt

Arabella?]

[Does anyone know who this guy is? He looks young, clean-cut. Could it be he's got a thing for

Arabella and, when she didn't reciprocate, decided to throw mud?]

[No way, right?]

Online, the buzz was all about figuring out who Algernon was. Some sleuths tracked the video back to Hope Hospital's official account. Meanwhile, Dr. Pierce from Hope Hospital was cornered by a swarm of journalists, ready to take their questions head-on.

"Bella's medical prowess is witnessed by everyone here, not just by me, the hospital director, but also by other doctors and patients."

Dr. Pierce said leisurely, "Phillip was treated here before, so naturally, a lot of people online are concerned about his recovery. Let me clarify things."

Reporters were jostling for a scoop, crowding around Dr. Pierce with their mics and cameras almost in his face.

"Six months ago, Phillip's condition took a turn for the worse. We had a Dr. Hermosa who was treating him, and she, fearing the responsibility, wanted to wait for the family before taking action. She suggested we administer a sedative and a 'peaceful passage' concoction."

"If it weren't for Bella happening by, going against the grain, and teaming up with Dr. Caden to save Phillip, he might well have been gone by now."

People online were stunned.

[If Dr. Pierce says so, Arabella's skills must be legit! So she really did save Phillip. And that car crash victim, she guided the surgery verbally. Incredible.]