

Can't Win 701

Chapter 701

Zoe gasped and took a step back as she watched Alyssa approach with a cold determination.

Despite wearing heels, Zoe was still shorter than Alyssa. However, the height wasn't the problem. Alyssa had outshined Zoe in terms of her inner qualities and her intimidating air. Zoe was reduced to nothing in front of Alyssa.

"W-What are you doing?" Zoe gasped. She turned white.

"Nothing much. I just want to clear your doubts," Alyssa replied with a calm smile and took off her surgeon cap. Her dark hair cascaded over her shoulders in a sassy way.

She announced, "Your dear Jasper is out of critical condition. You don't have to pray for him anymore.

Then, she whispered into Zoe's ear, "You should just ask for my help instead of praying. Since he got hurt because of me, I'll treat him till he's recovered. So, please don't waste your time worrying for him."

"Your daughter is none other than the renowned genius doctor-Dr. White!"

The revelation left everyone in a state of shock.

Alyssa Taylor, in addition to her remarkable skills as a manager at KS World Hotel and a genius designer, was now unveiled as a brilliant doctor. She was nothing short of a superhuman.

Newton and Javier looked shell-shocked. They couldn't believe what they had just heard.

People of their social standing were well aware of Dr. White's formidable reputation, as she was highly regarded for her surgical expertise. Receiving treatment from Dr. White was a great honor for anyone.

Despite her widespread acclaim, Dr. White was a mysterious figure who refused to show her face or engage in interviews. Only a select few, like Jonah and Abel, had been privy to her true identity.

The staggering revelation left Javier gaping in astonishment. Never had he imagined that the young woman who had lived under his roof for three years possessed such a multitude of talents.

It was not unusual for patients who underwent major surgeries to be in a coma for ten days. However, Jasper had a good physique thanks to his military background. He woke up on day four.

“Mr. Beckett! Mr. Beckett! Mr. Beckett!”

Jasper felt increasingly irritated as someone persistently called out to him. He struggled to open his eyes.

As his vision gradually cleared, he saw Xavier standing before him, appearing disheveled and visibly thinner.

Xavier was agitatedly spamming the emergency button by the bedside. ‘Mr. Beckett is awake! He’s awake!

“Anyone would wake up if you keep bothering them like this,’ grumbled Jasper, his ears ringing and his mind muddled. “Where am I?”

“The hospital, of course! Don’t you know you’ve undergone a life-and-death situation?” Xavier informed him. Tears welled up as he recalled the misfortune that befell Jasper.

“Oh... Lyse!” The first thing Jasper thought about after waking up was Alyssa’s safety. The last scene in his memory was of the attacker aiming the metal stick at Alyssa. He lost the memory of what happened.

Jasper rolled out of his bed and rushed over to Alyssa.

"You-" she began. He grasped her wrist and spun her around dizzily into a hug. She bumped her head against his chest.

"Lyse, I'm so glad you're safe," Jasper mumbled repeatedly and rested his chin on her shoulder. He seemed to care more about her than himself even when he was injured.

Alyssa refrained from touching Jasper. She protested, "You're still injured. Don't move around. Go back to your bed and rest now."

"No," he stubbornly refused, tightening his arms around her.

Widening her eyes, she sensed his fast-beating heart. Why? His body was warm and tense, his trembling suggesting something was wrong.

"Ms. Alyssa, you looked flushed. Are you feeling unwell?" he asked with concern.

“Ah, I’m fine,” she reassured him while silently cursing out Jasper. She took a deep breath and touched her burning cheeks. “Are Jasper’s CT scan results out yet?”

“Yes.” Abel retrieved the scan results from his drawer and handed it to her gravely. She scrutinized the results under the office lights, her expression turning troubled as her heart sank.

“Ms. Alyssa, you can tell what’s wrong, can’t you?” Abel looked worried. “But the surgery was a huge success. Only three doctors in the country have succeeded in performing this surgery sur

“Is this what you call a success?” she wondered, feeling frustrated. Her trembling hands lungs d by her body, ruffling the scan results.

"My dear son! You finally called!" Javier exclaimed with a smile. He was uncharacteristically warm and friendly.

Jasper blinked, taken aback by the warmth in Javier's tone. He had never enjoyed such a cordial conversation with his father, and Javier had never addressed him as "dear son."

Javier seemed to reserve his paternal affection for Justin alone, and that stung Jasper. He couldn't help but wonder if Javier considered Sophia his one true love and Justin his sole son

The overt favoritism was outrageous, leaving Jasper at a loss for words.

"Dad, how are you?" Justin asked. He had a distinctive chest voice and was loud enough to be heard by Jasper.

"I'm good. How about you? Are you recovering well at Mosgravia? Any releases? Javier questioned. He had flown to Mosgravia last year to visit Justin but was too busy to do the same the year

"I'm doing well, Dad. Please don't worry about me," Justin answered. Then, he shifted the topic with concern, "I heard that Jasper's hospitalized. How is he doing? Is it a serious case?"
