

Chapter 924 Back To The Williams Family

When Liam was chatting with Julie, Yesenia walked into the office.

She had recently seen Liam easily call top executives at Joy International Media, realizing he had significant influence.

This changed her usual dismissive attitude toward him. Entering, she started to flatter Liam.

"Liam, you're such a wonderful son-in-law! Julie's so fortunate to have you. Are you close to Edward, the manager at Joy International Media?" she asked, her tone dripping with flattery.

Liam felt a wave of disgust at her sudden change of attitude.

Where was her disdain for him before?

However, he let it slide, considering she was Julie's mother. At least she wasn't scheming against Julie this time.

But Liam wasn't naive enough to spill any secrets, especially with Yesenia fishing for information.

He thought back to something he had learned at the Confused, Yesenia asked, "Why should I go there? What's wrong?"

Julie, equally puzzled, turned to Liam, awaiting his explanation.

Liam dropped a bombshell. "It's because Newell has AIDS."

Yesenia was shocked by this revelation. She screamed, frozen in disbelief, and then cursed angrily.

"Newell! You bastard! How could you keep this from me?"

Upon learning that Newell had AIDS, Yesenia wasted no time and quickly left Pearl Company.

As Yesenia departed, Julie, with a face filled with concern, grasped Liam's hand and inquired, "Is it really true, Liam?"

Liam gave a nod, replying, "Let her face some hardship first. If she decides to change her ways, to stop being greedy and causing harm, especially to you, then even if she does have AIDS, I have the means to heal her."

Julie's worries eased upon hearing Liam's words.

Liam's confidence stemmed from his recent experience treating Watkins' wife, where he discovered the extraordinary effectiveness of the primogem energy...

Late into the night, Newell and his son mustered their courage and headed back to the Williams residence.

The police, feeling sympathetic, had lent them clothes.

The two of them stood at the door, uncertain. Gazing at the brightly lit Williams residence, they couldn't help but be stunned.

They had heard rumors about the Williams family's downfall.

Yet, it now seemed the family was unaffected.

Exchanging glances, they stepped into the hall.

Inside, they found it bustling with people, Derek included.

Newell, dragging Baxter along, fell to their knees, tears and snot mingling.

"Dad! I admit my mistakes. I should never have sided with Julie and her family! Julie's mother is a bitch! I was wrong. Please, let us return to the family!"

Seeing Newell kneel, Niko couldn't hide his scorn. "Son of a bitch! You decided to come back now, huh? Fuck off! The Williams family has no room for losers like you. Just get the fuck out of here!" he said, trying to shove Newell and his son away.

Niko's mood had soured ever since his son Doyle landed in jail. Now, he was taking his frustration out on Newell and his son, blaming them for everything.

Meanwhile, the other members of the Williams family also joined in the mockery.

"Look who's back. It was Newell and his son, the talk of Salem! Thanks to your little stunt at the Inferno Club, you've really 'honored' the Williams family's name."

"Damn it! You two are the ones who've embarrassed us all. And now you have the nerve to show your faces here? Get out!"

"Yes! You're no longer part of this family. Leave, or we'll call the police!"

Under this barrage of criticism, Newell and Baxter turned pale, unsure of how to respond.

Then, Derek, who had been quiet until now, finally said, "If you two want to come back, you'll have to prove your worth!"
