

Chapter 941 Dotson Nixon

Benedict was taken aback upon hearing Gallagher's words.

"The Dark Gang was destroyed? Who dared to do that?" he said.

Gallagher's face was etched in a grim expression. "Who else could it be? Who else in Salem possesses the power and courage? Only General Carsen! Tell me, have you offended the wrong people? Otherwise, why would you come to Bowen's office?"

Frightened by Gallagher's stern rebuke, Benedict hastily denied any involvement.

"No, I didn't. I merely asked Baldwin, the police chief of the Pineview District, to arrest Liam. But Ethan disrupted it with his men. I'm just here to secure Baldwin's release from the police station. By the way, Dad, I've just discovered something astonishing. Liam's wife, Julie, might be Bowen's mistress! With Bowen's support, Liam could regain his foothold in Salem. It all makes sense!"

Gallagher's brow furrowed as he recalled Liam's threatening visit to the Kingland Group.

Reflecting on this, he muttered in a low voice, "No wonder Liam dared to do that. It appears that Liam and Bowen have the backing of General Carsen."

Certain that he had pieced things together, Gallagher marched into Bowen's office with his men in tow, seating himself arrogantly upon a chair as soon as he entered.

In a deep voice, he demanded, "I know you can get in touch with General Carsen. I'm here to meet him and seek his cooperation. Call him now. I want to talk to him!"

Bowen scrutinized Gallagher for a moment before exiting his office.

He discreetly placed a call to Liam from a quiet location.

As soon as Bowen connected the call, he urgently asked, "General, Gallagher has arrived here with his men. He asked to see General Carsen. What should I do now?"

"Inform Gallagher that I refuse to see him. He can attend my party at the Heaven Star in Double Stars at six o'clock tomorrow night. At the party, I will rearrange dynamics and interests in Salem. The Hoffman family will be extinguished if they do not show up!" Liam said coldly.

Bowen agreed hastily. Then, Liam disconnected the call.

Upon returning to his office, Bowen relayed Liam's message to Gallagher, who stormed out in a fit of rage, slamming the door behind him.

As he left the office, Gallagher muttered with a cold, determined face. "General Carsen truly doesn't regard my family seriously! In that case, there is no need to seek his cooperation!"

His eyes filled with bitterness, Gallagher instructed his family to return home and ventured alone to a mountaintop villa.

In awe of the magnificent villa before him, Gallagher unconsciously bowed slightly, displaying respect.

He knew the man residing there held immense power.

The man was Dotson Nixon, assigned by the Duncan family to oversee the Hoffman family.

Gallagher dared not show disrespect to Dotson, a legendary Primogem Warrior.

Reverently bowing, Gallagher addressed him, "Mr. Nixon, significant changes are imminent in Salem! General Carsen is targeting my family. He threatens extermination unless we comply! Mr. Nixon, we respectfully seek your assistance."

That night, the Hoffman family made an unexpected announcement: The Kingland Group was hosting a banquet at the Earth Star in Double Stars. The purpose? To redistribute dynamics and interests in Salem!

The news reverberated through many local families, shocking them.

Earlier, they had received information from Bowen about General Carsen's planned banquet at the Heaven Star.

It seemed like a declaration of war by the Kingland Group against Carsen.

Faced with this startling turn of events, local influential figures were gripped by fear. They gathered, huddling together to discuss and debate whose side to align with amidst the brewing conflict.