

Chapter 1677 Don't Hide Anything From Me

Janet didn't answer Brandon's question right away. She looked embarrassed and glanced at Nightingale, who wore a sullen expression.

"I'm fine," Janet said to Brandon with a forced smile. "You have to discuss Jeremy, right? Go ahead, I'll be fine."

Brandon reached out, gently touching Janet's hair. "There are many who can chase Jeremy, but only I can be here with you. You're what matters most to me."

A blush crept onto Janet's cheeks, clearly shy from Brandon's words.

Nightingale huffed and stormed off without a backward glance.

Watching her leave, Janet felt a stir of worry and tugged at Brandon's sleeve. "Nightingale seems upset," she whispered.

Brandon shrugged. "She'll be fine. That's just her way."

Janet wasn't convinced. "Maybe get someone strong to go with her? She's headstrong, and that could be risky with Jeremy."

Brandon nodded. "I'll make sure she's safe. Don't worry."

He then studied Janet carefully, causing her to feel uneasy under his intense gaze. His face, once gentle, now looked serious.

"You don't seem alright. Are you hiding something from me?" Brandon asked with concern.

Janet paused, lifting her eyes to meet Brandon's piercing gaze. His eyes, sharp and searching, seemed to strip away her defenses.

Yet, Janet forced a composed sigh, her voice tinged with resignation. "You probably have spies around me, right? They must tell you everything."

Brandon, far from upset, smiled and tapped her nose affectionately. "I don't need spies to know when you're keeping secrets."

To ease any potential misunderstanding, he wrapped his arms around her.

In Brandon's embrace, Janet could hear his steady heartbeat, a comforting rhythm against the turmoil in her thoughts.

Brandon's voice, soft yet filled with concern, echoed alongside his heartbeat.

"I worry about you. What if someone troubles you, or you neglect your health? I can't bear the thought of losing you again."

These words shook Janet to her core.

Before she could respond, Brandon kissed her forehead tenderly. "So please don't keep things

Chapter 1677 Don't Hide Any... +120 Points at most from me, okay?"

The walls around Janet's heart crumbled. She stepped back from his embrace, her face serious. "Something upsetting did happen today."

"Hmm?" Brandon's brow furrowed, concern evident in his voice. "What happened?"

"Today, my mom wasn't feeling well and I took her to the hospital. At the hospital entrance, we ran into two odd women," Janet recounted.

You have unlocked exclusive limited-time benefits>>

GO NOW