

Chapter 1682 A Dazzling Dress

As Janet descended the stairs, her gaze landed on the dress Mandy had sent.

Draped on a hanger, the dress shone in pure white. It radiated elegance and combined luxury with a touch of subtlety. Its skirt sparkled with embedded diamonds and was crafted with delicate lace patterns. Soft floral designs wove through the fabric, lending it a sense of enigma and nobility.

Janet's eyes sparkled. Drawn by its charm, she stepped closer to the dress.

On the sofa, Mandy watched with a smile curling her lips. She reveled in the surprise and delight in Janet's eyes.

Pleasing Janet was no small feat.

With a smile, Mandy approached the dress and pointed at the fabric and the glittering diamonds. "I put a great deal of thought into this dress, from the choice of the fabric and selection of diamonds. I was involved in every part of its creation and even used my connections to obtain these exquisite materials."

Janet continued to gaze at the dress. She reached out her hand to touch the fabric and felt the care that had gone into its making.

"Thank you so much, Mandy." With a sense of appreciation, Janet voiced her thanks.

"What are you waiting for? Why don't you try it on?" Mandy suggested with a smile.

With Mandy's help, Janet hurried into the room to put on the dress.

When she emerged wearing it, Mandy was struck with awe.

The dress's long, flowing train spread elegantly on the floor and shimmered brilliantly. It was crafted from luxurious silk, and accentuated Janet's figure, enhancing her natural grace.

Janet was beyond pleased with the dress. It exceeded her expectations, and she was very satisfied with the collaboration she had with Mandy.

"It looks amazing!" Mandy exclaimed with astonishment written all over her face. She had always known Janet was beautiful, but she hadn't expected she would take her breath away. "Are you happy with it?"

"Yes. Very happy," Janet affirmed.

A wave of pride washed over Mandy's face. She turned to her assistant and ordered, "I'm going to have a chat with Janet. Please contact Brandon and make sure the bill is settled."

"Understood," the assistant replied.

After helping Janet out of the gown, Mandy settled onto the sofa in the living room to continue their conversation.

"By the way, you came at the perfect time. I've been delving into some design books lately, and there are parts I don't quite understand. Now that you're here, I can ask for your insights," Janet said, a hint of perplexity in her expression.

"Sure. What do you need help with? Let's take a look," Mandy responded with an encouraging smile.

Shortly after, Janet gathered all the design books she had been studying recently and handed them over to Mandy.

Mandy went through the books and took her time to explain the concepts to Janet.

Since Janet returned with amnesia, Mandy had become less condescending in their interactions. She showed remarkable patience, especially when Janet asked questions about design. She shared her expertise willingly and made sure Janet understood.

After discussing several design queries, Janet expressed her gratitude. "Thank you so much for being so open and willing to share your knowledge."

Mandy lifted her chin slightly and replied, "These are things you would've known before you lost your memory. It's no big deal sharing them with you."

She paused for a beat and then added, "Besides, I look forward to seeing you regain your design skills from before. I'd rather compete with you at your best than outshine a rookie who's lost her memory."

Janet met Mandy's gaze, and they exchanged smiles. Then, with a renewed spark in her eyes, she responded, "Alright then. Let's compete and see who comes out on top!"