

Ex-Wife 1693

Chapter 1693

"We don't know what happened, and there's no point in fighting. We need to find him first!" Quinton sighed. "Nothing's confirmed yet. I was supposed to die at sea back then, but I'm standing here in front of you, aren't I?"

Xavier glared at him, but gradually calmed down. "You're right, nobody knows what happened to him. He's an amazing person, so I'm sure he's fine!"

After he had calmed down, he discussed the situation with Quinton and the villagers, and they started looking for Stefan around the mountains. They must see him even if he was dead. If not, it meant that there was a chance that he was still alive.

Aweek had passed.

Renee took the medicine on time every day in Beach City. She was getting better, and could now get out of bed on her own and eat. She could even walk up and down the stairs.

Owen gave her a check-up and smiled happily. "It's good news, Ms.

Everheart! Your body mass index is back to normal. If everything goes smoothly, you won't even have to take the medicine after this." "Oh, that's wonderful!" Leia jumped up happily, as if she was one who had escaped death. "The medicine really stinks, Dr. Wagner, and I feel like vomiting whenever I smell it. Ren, however, has to have it three times a day. If you don't stop it, she might because of the smell." "Yes, it smells, but it's very good for the body since it's made of rare herbs." While talking, Owen put away the stethoscope and gently asked Renee, "Ms. Everheart, how are you feeling?" "I'm much better now. Thank you, Dr. Wagner. You saved my brother's life, and now you've saved mine. You're my family's savior," Renee remarked sincerely. She was very grateful to Owen, but wasn't in the mood to talk much. She'd been worried sick about Stefan for a week now.

Owen and Leia exchanged glances and sighed. They knew why Renee was disappointed, but didn't bring it up. They didn't want to make her more anxious by telling her what really happened; it was better to just wait patiently since no news was technically good news.

"Ren, the Asiatic apple seems to have blossomed, and it smells so nice. I'll take you there, okay?" Leia linked her arm with Renee's and suggested enthusiastically. It was spring right now, and everything was bursting with life. Leia didn't want Renee to stay in her room all the time and get more stressed.

"No, I don't want to go," Renee said stubbornly. She only wanted to wait for Stefan to come home.

"You might not want to go, but I do. Come with me. You know I don't have many hobbies, but I do love flowers. Come on!" Leia leaned her head on Renee's shoulder and tried to persuade her.

Renee could never refuse Leia when she acted like this. She sighed and reluctantly agreed.