

Married At First Sight Chapter 3159

Ms. Girard parked the car, changed out of her flat shoes, put on high heels, took her bag, and then opened the door and got out of the car.

“mom.” The son hugged her and said, “Mom, I miss you so much.”

The mother and son only saw each other twice, in the evening and in the morning. During the day, she was busy with business and did not go home for lunch. Her parents-in-law and nannies took care of her son.

The child was very sensible but also very aggrieved. He believed that his mother, who had spent little time with him and had not taken him out to play for a long time, had also disappeared after his father’s death.

On weekends, school was on holiday, but his mother was still busy with things. His mother had to treat clients to dinner, play golf with them, or attend various banquets.

Ms. Girard felt sour and hugged back her son’s little body.

A nine-year-old child was as tall as other people’s seven-year-old children.

She always felt that she was busy with business and paid less attention to her son, which caused him to be thin.

She was not like Liberty, who had a good sister who could help take care of the children. Liberty could work on her career with confidence, all because she had a good sister to support her.

Not only could her natal family not be her support, but after her husband passed away and she took over his business, she wanted to divide his property.

She always thought about plotting against herself and her husband’s family.

Obviously, her natal family was not poor, but her heart was too greedy.

There were disputes among wealthy families. There were very few families that did not engage in arguments or quarrels.

Among the wealthy families in Wiltspoon, the York family stood out. Old Mrs. York was good at housekeeping and raising children and grandchildren. She was in charge of selecting her daughter-in-law and grandson-in-law. The first requirement for an old lady was good character.

She took a virtuous wife.

The York family men did this.

God also favored the men of the York family. They marry not only good wives but also attractive wives.

A good daughter-in-law from one generation and good children and grandchildren from the second generation.

Nowadays, all the sons of the York family are handsome.

Ms. Girard thought that, after all, she was not as good as Liberty and Serenity. If she had been able to marry into the York family... Old Mrs. York might have looked down on the Girard family's daughter. The Girard family faced numerous disputes.

"Mom is back."

Ms. Girard let go of her son, then grabbed his hand and walked towards the main room.

As she walked, she asked in a warm voice, "Have you finished your homework?"

"I'm done. I've also completed all the homework my tutor assigned me."

Ms. Girard's son's academic performance was mediocre. She spent a lot of money to put her son in the best primary school in Wiltspoon, but her son's academic performance was mediocre, and he was under great pressure to study in school. Every time he took an exam, he always came in last.

To improve her son's academic performance, Ms. Girard spent a lot of money inviting several famous teachers to come back and give her son one-on-one tutoring.

She and her husband gave birth to a son a year after they got married. When her son was two years old, her husband died. So, she only has one child.

Her husband's family had a big business. Her parents-in-law only had one son, her husband, and she had only one son. Her son would naturally inherit her husband's family's property in the future.

If the son is not strong enough, he will not be able to maintain the family business in the future.

Ms. Girard did not have time to accompany her son, but he placed great importance on his education.

“Did you do everything right? Your math score is the worst. You need to spend more time on math.”
