

Chapter 1021 The Mourning Hall

Chaz hadn't expected Liam to disagree with his request. He hesitated for a moment.

But not long after, he nodded heavily, glanced at the people behind him, and sighed softly. Finally, he led the way.

Liam followed Chaz. Then, the rest of the members of the Hoffman family also followed them, forming a long line.

They walked for around ten minutes.

Chaz took them to the gate of a remote and dilapidated villa. He skillfully opened the gate, turned to Liam, and said, "This is it."

After saying this, he guided everyone to the farthest corner of the villa.

It was a mourning hall.

Liam immediately saw his grandfather's preserved body inside a crystal coffin. The crystal coffin had blocked all the air, making his grandfather's body well-preserved.

After saying this, he guided everyone to the farthest corner of the villa.

It was a mourning hall.

Liam immediately saw his grandfather's preserved body inside a crystal coffin. The crystal coffin had blocked all the air, making his grandfather's body well-preserved.

Liam noticed that aside from his grandfather's coffin, there were also other people's small tombstones neatly placed in the mourning hall.

He was deeply moved by the scene in front of him. He looked around and found that these tombstones all belonged to the family members who had died in the catastrophe of the Hoffman family.

He instantly burst into tears.

Finally, the emotions he had bottled up for years were unleashed. He dropped to the floor, crying out loud.

Not only he but also the other members of the Hoffman family behind him knelt spontaneously. Too ashamed to face Sergio's coffin, they could only sob quietly.

Although Julie's stay in the Hoffman family's house had been short, she admired Sergio very much and respected those who had died in the Hoffman family's disaster. So, she knelt alongside Liam.

When Shayla saw Julie kneel, she followed suit.

Liam remained kneeling on the floor for a long time. Then, he slowly stood up.

He stepped forward, stared at Sergio inside the crystal coffin, and murmured, "Grandpa, I'm back. Don't worry. I swear to avenge the Hoffman family. I won't let your and the other members of the Hoffman family's death be in vain."

After saying that, he looked around the tombstones in the hall and turned to the members of the Hoffman family, who were still kneeling on the floor. Then, he asked Chaz, "Who set up this mourning hall?"

Chaz heaved a deep sigh and explained, "Everyone. We willingly helped each other to build this. For the sake of our own interests, we failed the Hoffman family. But it doesn't mean we have no feelings for these Hoffman family members. Liam, we realized our mistakes, and we are truly sorry. We shouldn't have disregarded the collective interests of the Hoffman family for our selfish desires."

As soon as Chaz said that, the other members of the Hoffman family behind him also expressed their regrets.

"Liam, we are the sinners of the Hoffman family, and we feel too ashamed of it."

"Liam, we no longer hope to survive. We only hope you can help rebuild the Hoffman family and reach the peak again. Let those enemies see that our Hoffman family can't be knocked down by those setbacks."

"Liam, let us die. Only by dying can we have the courage to face Sergio."

Liam listened to everyone's repentance, but he didn't know if they were sincere or not.

However, they were still members of the Hoffman family.

This was an undeniable fact, and there was nothing he could do to change it.

Liam lowered his head slightly and stared at Sergio inside the crystal coffin.

If Sergio were alive, he definitely would not want to see him and the other members of the Hoffman family killing each other.

Liam fell silent for a while, pondering. Then, he looked at the people of the Hoffman family and said in a deep voice, "I will move all the tombstones and the coffins here to the current house of the Hoffman family. As for all of you, I'm not going to kill you. But from now on, you can no longer call yourselves a member of the Hoffman family. You don't deserve to be a part of the Hoffman family anymore. We have cleared all the grudges between us, and we're even. You can all leave now."
