

Chapter 1765 I Want To Spend The Day With You

On the second day, Janet woke up at 9:30 A.M., finding herself alone in the bedroom.

After a quick shower, she went downstairs with drowsy eyes to make breakfast. To her surprise, she found Brandon sitting at the dining table enjoying breakfast and reading a newspaper.

With a puzzled expression, she walked up to him and asked, "Don't you have to work today, Brandon?"

Putting the newspaper aside, Brandon grabbed a piece of bread, spread Janet's favorite jam on it, and placed it on the plate in front of her with a smile.

"There's nothing major going on at the office these days, so I've asked Sean to fax over any files that require my attention. More importantly, I want to spend the day with you," Brandon replied in a soft tone.

Ultimately, he just wanted to stay home with Janet because he was worried about her emotional state.

Immediately realizing Brandon's true motive, Janet shook her head and reassured him, saying, "I'm fine, Brandon. You don't have to stay home with me."

Brandon arched an eyebrow, placing a cup of milk in front of Janet. "You don't want me around?"

"No," Janet replied firmly. "I'm really fine. I only cried yesterday because I've been studying far too much dull, basic concepts recently and spending too much time sketching design drafts. I'm just exhausted."

Upon hearing this, Brandon reached out and gently stroked her hair, asking, "What are your plans for today?"

Supporting her chin with one hand, Janet tilted her head, took a moment to think, and smiled. "I'm thinking of taking a break today and combining work with relaxation. I want to unwind a bit these days so that my mood can improve."

Brandon agreed with Janet's words and nodded.

"So it's best you head to work soon." Her voice was soft and pleasant, carrying a touch of playfulness. After all, she didn't want Brandon to be late for work because of her.

"No, I just want to be with you." Brandon wore a stern expression, allowing no room for objection. "It feels like it's been forever since we went shopping together. How about we go for a shopping spree today?"

Janet touched her forehead helplessly and took a bite of the bread, savoring its sweet taste and soft texture as it melted in her mouth. While chewing, she declined his offer. "No, I can't go shopping with you."

Brandon wore a puzzled expression.

Before he could ask why, however, he was cut off by Janet. "Alternatively, I could go with Laney. I'll pay her a visit and see the child, then go shopping with her. As for you, you can head to the office."

A tinge of disappointment flickered in Brandon's eyes. Since he couldn't oppose Janet's decision, he nodded reluctantly.

After breakfast, Janet headed straight to the closet, quickly changing into a long white dress in preparation for her outing.

As she made her way downstairs, she saw Brandon still seated in the living room sofa.

Upon seeing Janet descending the stairs, he quickly walked up to her and took her hand. "Let's go."

Perplexed, Janet gazed at him with a questioning expression. "Where are we going?"

"I'm driving you to Laney's place, of course." With those words, the duo got into the car.

Shortly after, Brandon dropped Janet off at Laney's doorstep.

Just as Janet was about to press the doorbell, she heard the faint cries of a child emanating from the house.
