

Chapter 1768 Stock Price Is On The Decline

Laney and Garrett quickly noticed the changes in Janet and Brandon's demeanor. Laney promptly tugged at Garrett's shirt and shot him a cold glare, signaling him to stop talking.

It then dawned on Garrett that his words had hurt Janet and Brandon, reminding them of memories they had tried hard to forget.

Garrett forced a wry smile, feeling so awkward that he momentarily entertained the idea of slapping himself in the face.

Noticing that Janet looked sad, Brandon attempted to redirect her focus. He cast a disapproving glance at Garrett and quickly changed the topic.

"Indeed, your daughter is adorable. But Garrett, do you really believe it's okay for you to stay home every day to take care of her while neglecting Harding Group?"

Upon hearing the question, Garrett replied, "I have no choice. My sweetheart just won't let me be!"

As he spoke, he sat next to Laney and took the baby from her.

Laney couldn't have been more dumbfounded.

Clearly, it was Garrett who couldn't bear to be apart from his daughter.

"Harding Group's stock price is on the decline, and it's being reported all over the press," Brandon said in a deep voice. "Some people may get the impression that you're plotting a scheme to rip off shareholders."

Brandon had watched a similarly framed report on TV earlier that morning.

"Is that so?" Upon hearing Brandon's words, Laney couldn't help but burst into laughter.

At the same time, Janet appeared visibly better.

Garrett found it quite challenging to manage the affairs of his company.

He focused all of his attention on Anya now, spending less time on Harding Group.

Now that Brandon had brought up the topic, however, Garrett immediately became curious about the current trends in the stock market. Quickly, he handed the baby back to Laney.

"Tell me, Brandon. What's been happening in the stock market lately?" Garrett's excitement and curiosity surged. Without delay, he took Brandon into the study to deliberate on how to improve his company's stock.

Garrett and Brandon's swift departure left Janet and Laney alone in the living room, with the latter holding Anya in her arms.

Out of the blue, the little chubby baby in Laney's arms burst into giggles, her eyes narrowing to slits.

Instantly captivated by Anya, Janet moved closer and teased her playfully.

Gazing at Anya's rosy, chubby face, Janet felt the overwhelming urge to plant a kiss on her face.

Anya was a smart baby. Instead of crying when Janet teased her, she responded with joyful laughter, infusing the living room with a much more positive atmosphere.

Laney had been concerned that Janet might not have been in the mood for the whole baby affair.

Upon seeing that Janet was perfectly fine, however, she could finally breathe a sigh of relief.

In an attempt to further lift Janet's spirits, Laney asked excitedly, "You mentioned that you wanted to go shopping, right? How about we go right now?"

Janet shook her head and cast a glance at Anya, worried that there'd be no one to take care of the baby.

"Anya is not a naughty girl. Let's take her along. We can enjoy some afternoon tea and pick up some baby products for her."
