

Chapter 1078 Excellent Shooter

The soldiers unanimously agreed to Trevor's suggestion of holding a quick shooting competition to determine who would play the role.

Since they were chosen to be Nicolas' guards, the soldiers must be the best among their peers. They all seemed confident with their marksmanship.

Nicolas laughed lightly. "Okay. We'll follow Levi's suggestion."

He patted Trevor's shoulder and said, "Since you came up with the idea, why don't you join in? These firearms are strictly for military use, but you can try using them today."

Trevor rubbed his hands together excitedly. "Will that be okay? Can I really join you?"

He had always been interested in military weapons.

One of the soldiers thrust his gun into Trevor's hand and smiled.

"Stop asking and join in. Not everyone is given this chance."

Nicolas issued a rifle and a pistol to Trevor. Since he thought Trevor had no prior experience in practice shooting, Nicolas guided him on how to safely aim and shoot at the target.

"The first round is pistol shooting. Ready, aim, and fire!"

As soon as Nicolas gave the order, everyone aimed their pistol and shoot at the target.

The echoing gunshots filled the shooting range.

But when the noise died down and the results were out, there was complete silence because everyone was shocked.

"Levi, bull's eye!"

Trevor drew intrigued looks from the soldiers. Even Nicolas remarked in surprise, "That was neat, Levi. You're a good shooter, probably on par with the best shooter in our unit."

Trevor rubbed the back of his head and said modestly, "I used to do practice shooting before."

He was trained by Bradly. Although military pistols were slightly different from the ones used in the shooting range, Trevor could maneuver them easily.

With his great posture and perfect aim, Trevor aced the following rifle shooting and ranked first again.

The soldiers couldn't help but applaud Trevor. One of them praised, "Wow! That was awesome, Levi! I didn't expect you to be this good at shooting. You're an excellent shooter!"

Nicolas also clapped, his smile reaching his ears. "Good job, Levi! I think you should play the supporting role in the movie."

Trevor waved his hand dismissively. "No, no. The purpose of this competition was to choose from your unit."

Nicolas insisted. "They don't have time. Besides, they need to train. As you've seen in the competition, most of them are no match for you in shooting. They will need to train more."

The captain of the unit smiled bitterly and said, somewhat embarrassed, "I also think you should take it, Levi. We all got the same results, but none of us is willing to back down. Instead of letting others get the part and flaunt themselves in front of me, I'd rather have you play the role."

Trevor had not anticipated this outcome. "Won't that be inappropriate?"

The captain was firm. "Of course not! You already look like a professional shooter. As we said, your shooting skills are excellent and on par with the best shooter in our unit. We all think you are the best choice. No one is more suitable than you for the role!"

Just like that, the actor for the last supporting role was decided.

The shooting for Sky Film and Television Company's debut movie soon commenced.

Since Trevor only played a supporting role, he didn't need to be on set all the time because his character only had a few appearances throughout the film.

Moreover, his scenes weren't complicated. Under Asho's guidance, Trevor quickly learned how to act his part.

So far, the shooting had been going so smoothly that Trevor couldn't help but wonder if Caitlin and Kabir had given up.

Just then, he saw Kabir and Wilbert near the filming site.

Trevor's eyes narrowed.

The two were talking with a person in a purple sweater.
