

Married At First Sight Chapter 3383

Married At First Sight Chapter 3383-When it came to giving money to their old father, Marco and his two brothers all smiled, changed the subject, and then surrounded their old father and went back into the house.

After the last lesson, how dare they give money to their father secretly?

Whatever their father needed, they could buy it. But they really didn't dare give money.

A few hundred dollars was fine, but they couldn't give it every day. If they give it every day, Holden can save it and save tens of thousands of dollars in a month.

Tens of thousands of dollars are not a penny to them, but to Holden, who is under strict supervision and always has little money, it is a large amount of money that can allow him to do many things. What if Holden uses the money they give him to do something to let down the old mom?

They didn't dare to think about the consequences.

Holden knew what his sons were thinking. His face darkened, and he looked sad.

Returning to the room, Holden walked straight to the sofa and sat down, then picked up a pack of cigarettes from the coffee table, took out a cigarette and lit it, then leaned back and smoked silently.

He was such a failure as a human being. As a husband, he couldn't control his wife, and he had to be controlled by her. As a father, he couldn't act like a father and couldn't control his children.

In the Farrell family mansion, he seemed to be the master, but in fact, he was not even as good as the butler.

His children all have higher status than him. Even his little grandson has higher status than him.

Clarissa had no real feelings for him, but she did for her children and grandchildren.

Whoever she liked would be the master in the Farrell family and would live a prosperous life.

Sometimes, Holden regretted that he had become Clarissa's son-in-law for money, thinking that it would be very free and easy, but in the end...

Later, the Janzen family received a lot of benefits from the Farrell family, and he didn't dare to act rashly, fearing that Clarissa would take action against the Janzen family.

He had brothers and sisters.

Besides, his three sons also had his surname and were members of the Janzen family.

Every time he got together with his brothers and sisters, they would remind him not to anger Clarissa and to please Clarissa so that their Janzen family's wealth could last forever.

“Dad, it's not that we don't want to give you money; it's just that mom is too strict. Mom can easily find out where our money went.”

“Yes, Dad, it's not that we are unfilial to you; it's just that Mom is too troublesome.”

“Dad, what do you need? Just tell us, and we'll buy it for you. Isn't that the same thing?”

After Marco and his brothers handed the purchased items to the servants, they asked the servants to prepare the hot pot while they walked to their old father and surrounded him to coax him.

“Can't you give me a few hundred dollars? Your mom usually gives me $500 a day.” Holden asked his sons angrily. “Your mom is strict, but she also controls your one thousand or several hundred? It's not like I took a million or several hundred thousand from you like before.”

Of course, Holden knew that Clarissa was keeping a close eye on him.

“You guys should give me a few hundred dollars every day so that I can have some money for cigarettes. I also need to go out and socialize. It's so embarrassing to be penniless all the time.”

Holden couldn't find women anymore, but he could still invite old friends out for parties and eat and drink.

Clarissa didn't care about him eating and drinking. Back then, the couple was separated; would Clarissa still care about him?

Holden guessed that Clarissa was going on a long journey this time for the man she truly loved.

Holden already knew Clarissa had a love.
