

Chapter 763

763 THEIR WORLD COLLAPSED (4)

Haco happened to give Cane a poison, something that he said Iris wanted him to make out of impulse, which later on, his mate told him about the grievances she felt and didn't really mean it. Especially when Oliver had died.

However, because the poison had been made, it would be a waste if Cane didn't use it for his own benefit, especially with the uniqueness of the poison.

It was a slow acting poison that could be fatal, only if it was triggered. To put it simple, like an allergy, you had it, but it wouldn't be a trouble if you didn't come in contact with the source of your allergies.

This poison was the same like that.

Knowing this unique poison that Haco created could benefit him, Cane asked the sorcerer to make more, which was not easy with his current condition, but in the end, Haco managed to do it.

Ever since in the beginning, Cane entrusted Redmond to poison all of their enemy's warrior. But, even that task was a little bit complicated, since they couldn't come in contact. There would be no communication whatsoever between them and Redmond could change his mind in any moment.

That wouldn't be only their adversity, because when Redmond was with them, he had to convince them that he was one hundred percent on their side. Gained their trust was not a small challenge, it was a great deal that could put Redmond's life in danger too.

That was why, Redmond kept telling Cane that he could turn to be a traitor during this mission.

But now, when Cane crushed the stone beneath his feet and a certain fragrance was released in the air from that stone, which triggered the poison that had been given prior, Cane knew Redmond had done his job well.

More than half of the warriors immediately dropped death to the ground, while the rest writhed in pain, blood oozed out from their orifices, as they were breathing heavily, trying to hold back their pain, but some of them couldn't.

The spread of the poison was uneven, but that was enough to prove how deadly the poison made by Haco was.

The matter in the black market also had been discussed beforehand, but Aria's existence was something that neither Cane nor Redmond expected. But, because there was no way for Redmond to let Cane knew, he could only give a meaningful look to him when they met in the black market a few months ago. Of course, it didn't help much.

However, aside from that unexpected variable, their plan worked well.

"What is going on? What happened?" Cedric asked in bewilderment to watch their opponent fell to the ground.

Both parties stopped advancing forward, while Cane's people did that because of shock, since only a handful of people knew about this plan, the other party did that because they were dead or dying.

However, the same thing didn't happen to alpha Nolan and alpha Gallot, both of them were perfectly fine, so did lady Cyan. www.novelworld.com

Yet, Redmond had taken care of lady Cyan first. He only had one chance to strike and he chose the strongest and the more bothersome among the three, since Aria didn't even important enough to be put into Redmond's calculation.

In Redmond's eyes, Aria was only a living bundle of meat that couldn't die. Annoying to the extreme.

"Y-you...!?" Lady Cyan growled, you could see how she was gurgling, choking in her own blood, as her body collapsed to the ground.

But, Redmond's cut was not deep enough, so her neck still etched on her body. She was crawling on the snowy ground, leaving red traces in her wake, while Redmond stood there, enjoying the sight.

"What have you done?!" Alpha Gallot roared, while alpha Nolan was dumbstruck to watch countless warriors, thousands of them died in a mere second. This was not what they expected, this was not how they planned to deal with Cane.

In reality, it was Cane, who dealt with them. The alpha had planned everything since the very beginning. He considered all the small detail and took precaution of all the variable that might happened, everything that he could think of.

He tried his best to reduce the death on his side, but still, after all the pain he had to take and how he had wrecked his brain to protect his people to the best of his ability... the lost that he had to endure was missed from his calculation.

"Y-you... you are a traitor!" Alpha Nolan pointed his accusatory finger toward Redmond, he was shaking, his words were trembling, while the red hair warriors only grinned at him, looking satisfied enough with his deception.

Redmond raised his brows. "I am not. It is only that I am too smart for you to be fooled by me." He couldn't stop grinning from ear to ear, while glancing at lady Cyan, who was trying to crawl her way out and Aria, who was screaming bloody murder from inside the carriage when she realized what was going on.

Without her arms and legs, she couldn't move.

"You kill your fellow warriors!" Alpha Nolan barked.

"My fellow warriors? I don't even consider them my fellow comrades." Redmond still remembered what they had done to the children and the women from the previous pack.

Yes, it was not the first time for Redmond to witness such scene, since alpha Gerald and Mason had done the same thing in the past too. www.novelworld.com

But maybe, after following Cane for some time, he now realized how sick it was.

"I am going to kill you!" Alpha Gallot snarled, he immediately shifted into his beast and attacked Redmond. He aimed to kill him for his betrayal!

Redmond immediately shifted into his beast too and charged toward him. His movement was swift and precise when he clawed the alpha's stomach.

Alpha Gallot must have forgotten that he was a warrior, a battle hardened warrior, someone who spent almost his entire life to fight, he was born for that, while alpha Gallot indulged himself in women's bosom and between their legs, Redmond grew up by killing his way to be the leader of the Blue Moon pack warrior.

Soon enough, the knights charged forward to kill those warriors, who were still alive. They were hard to kill because of the black magic, but it seemed, Haco's poison was more potent, though there were still hundred of them were dying.

In the end, all the knights and warriors looked around for the survival and killed them all.

Meanwhile, Cane walked toward the massacre steadily. He was not in hurry and the first person that he approached was lady Cyan, who was still struggling to breath, she held her almost cut off neck, while widened her eyes at Cane.

Jace and Ethan had secured alpha Gallot and alpha Nolan for Cane to deal with them later.

"Good job, brother," Jace said to Redmond, he hit his shoulder.

"I don't remember I have an ugly sibling like you." Redmond frowned, but Ethan didn't heed his remark.

"I know this is the perfect job for you."

Redmond scoffed. "Don't tell me that you didn't have a single doubt."

"Of course, not," Eth lied blatantly through his teeth.

In the meantime, Lou was dumbfounded. He didn't know what was going on and how these people died. Less than an hour ago.

he thought, he was going to die in this battlefield and had even said his 'goodbye' to Sabian.

But, what was going on?

However, seeing Eth and Jace didn't look very surprised, he realized almost in an instant that everything had been planned by Cane. "That man is insane..." Lou muttered to himself.

The merchant stared at Cane, who was staring down at the dying lady Cyan, while the warriors and the knights skimmed the perimeter of this area and found Aria, who was still screaming inside the carriage. They were shocked to see her condition, but left her there to scream as long as she wanted.

Cane crouched down, he looked at lady Cyan with cold eyes. It was very scary to see him being very quiet like this. He looked www.novelworld.com like even if the sky fell apart, it wouldn't change his facial expression.

"You curse my baby."

That was not a question, but a statement. Even if it was not lady Cyan who had done it, it didn't mean, she would leave unscathed. She might not be able to leave at all...

"You mind controlled those people and killed my baby."

Cane took lady Cyan's arm and cut it with his claw. It was a clean cut. Lady Cyan couldn't scream and wish she could die right there and then, but Cane didn't allow her.

"Call Grace," Cane ordered one of the warriors, who rushed toward the pack and returned with the healer. "I want you to keep her alive until I am done with her."

Grace felt like she wanted to cry. She was terrified to see lady Cyan's state right now, especially when she had to be in close proximity with her, so she needed to witness all the sick thing that Cane did to her.

"You cursed my daughter with this hand, hm?" Cane took lady Cyan's other hand and cut it off as well. Now, without both of her arms, she wouldn't be able to perform any magic anymore.

"Kill me!" Lady Cyan screamed, she glared viciously at Cane and Grace, who kept her alive to go through this torture.

But then, Cane gauged her eyes.
