Since it was a blackout caused by a malfunction, Shirley could eliminate the possibility of the Stewart family trying to murder her.

With a slight sigh of relief, Shirley slowly moved her hand away from Braden's neck and subconsciously wanted to distance herself from him.

Unexpectedly, he suddenly wrapped his iron-like arm around her waist forcefully, causing their bodies to press against each other tightly.

Startled, Shirley froze, not daring to move at all. She stammered, "What ... do you mean?"

Braden was silent. He wrapped his other hand around her waist like he was hugging a large furry doll.

Shirley was flustered. She struggled and warned, "Braden, don't take advantage of the dark to act like a rogue. Let me go, or you'll be sorry!"

"Don't move!"

Braden hugged her even tighter, like a koala holding a tree.

"You're pushing me. It seems you don't want your arm anymore, so I..."

Shirley slowly exerted force and was about to kick Braden away when she heard the sound of sobbing.

Braden was crying!

Shirley immediately quieted down. She was stunned as if seeing an alien picking its nose. This was too abnormal!

"What's... what's wrong?"

She asked cautiously out of curiosity.

"You probably don't know. I was traumatized. The dark reminds me of my brother's death. I get nervous and urgently need comfort. Otherwise... the consequences will be very serious."

Braden whispered to her in a choked voice.

Really?

Shirley was skeptical and asked, "How serious will it be?"

“I’ll be short of breath. My heart will beat faster. I’ll die from the failure of my internal organs.”

Chapter 322 Passion

In the dark, Braden’s kiss made Shirley’s mind go blank.

She did not want to think too much either. By instinct, she grabbed his collar and said domineeringly, “Just kiss me. You talk too much!”

Then, she kissed him actively...

This was not the first time they were intimate. Last time, they had been more passionate.

It was just that they had been drunk back then and could say they were under the influence of alcohol. This time, they were sober. There would be no excuse if they had sex.

Therefore, the two of them had a tacit understanding. At the last moment, they both stopped.

Against the door, Shirley slid to the carpet. She tidied up her clothes and rubbed her hair in frustration. "Crazy. I must have been crazy just now. Don't take it seriously. It was purely....

biological instinct!"

Braden's hoarse voice contained a hint of forbearance. He coughed twice and said, "I understand.

It's the same for me. Biological instinct."

He unconsciously moved closer to Shirley. The two sat on the floor side by side.

Shirley immediately put on a defensive stance. "What do you want to do now?"

"Didn't I say it already? I was traumatized. Let me lean on you. You won't regret it."

Braden wrapped his arm around Shirley's shoulder.

Shirley gritted her teeth, her face twisted in anger, and in the end, she could not bear to push him away...

Unknowingly, a few hours had passed, and the study was still dark and quiet.

"Why hasn't the line been fixed? Is the Stewart family so inefficient?"

Shirley almost couldn't take it anymore, and her voice was very irritable.

Tracy leaned on the door and listened. Her expression was a little complicated. “Something is wrong. Why is my son screaming now? And he screams more miserably. Is Shirley beating him up?”

Molly said, "How could that be? Mrs. Stewart is elegant and gentle. She speaks softly. As a refined noble lady, she won't do such a violent thing."

"You don't know her well and were deceived by her gentleness. In fact, she's very rough, quite like me when I was young..."

"Then, you have less reason to worry. I can only say that Mrs. Stewart has a technique to deal with Mr. Stewart. Heehee... I didn't expect to see this side of Mr. Stewart. I'm too embarrassed to hear it."

Molly imagined the scene inside and couldn't help but cover her face with embarrassment.

"You're right. This should be called a technique of dealing with the husband!"

Tracy was enlightened and praised, "Shirley is amazing. She is even excellent at this. How perfect.

It seems that my wish to have a grandson will soon be fulfilled."

Tracy and Molly finally left.

After a while, power was back on in the villa. The study was as bright as day.

It was sooner than Braden and Shirley had thought.

So, the two of them were still in a very ambiguous position. Held in Braden's arms and facing his chest, Shirley was tickling him...

The light was like a pause button, causing all the "madness" to stop.

"Um, it looks like we don't have to act anymore."

Shirley tidied her hair and got off Braden awkwardly.

Braden seemed a little embarrassed. He held his breath and said softly. "I think so."

Shirley went to the door. It opened easily.

She heaved a sigh of relief and turned to Braden. "It was a misunderstanding today. Sorry to disturb you."

"What misunderstanding?"

Shirley had a spoonful of cream. It tasted like ice cream, sweet and fresh, reaching straight to her heart. It was very delicious.

All these years of suffering were worth it...

The next day.

Shirley got up early. After breakfast, she took the children to kindergarten.

On the way, she asked the kids, especially Bennett.

“Bennett, tell me honestly. Did Mr. Quintin give you any benefits? Why are you on his side so soon?”

“Didn’t I tell you to take good care of your sister? There are bad people. In the end, you took your sister away with that man, you little traitor!”

“Mommy, listen to me. It’s a misunderstanding!”

Bennett drank a mouthful of water from his small bottle and blabbered, “If Ally had called another man daddy, I would’ve opposed it. But Mr. Quintin is different. He’s amazing and very patient with us. I asked him to cook delicious food for you, and he agreed and improved his cooking skills... Do you know what the most important thing is?”

“I don’t know. I only know that he’s not a good person. I wonder how he got you on his side!”

Shirley felt frustrated, wondering how Mr. Quintin, a wicked person with such a bad reputation, impressed the kids.

After all, her kids were very smart. Not anyone could impress them.

“The most important point is that I hear that Mr. Quintin is our bad daddy’s sworn enemy. I think that if you and he join hands, our bad daddy will be finished. He can’t hurt you anymore!”

“You...”

Shirley opened her mouth slightly. Her original anger was replaced by a complicated mood.

She hadn’t expected that a young kid like Bennett would think so much.

She was also surprised to know Bennett hated Braden so much, even more than she did!

The little guy must have heard much gossip these years. Otherwise, he wouldn’t hate his biological daddy to this extent.

Shirley tried to calm Bennett down. “Ben, listen. In fact, your daddy isn’t that bad. The reason we

A warm applause sounded. Some married women felt the same way as Shirley and kept clapping their hands.

"Well said. Women shouldn't look down upon each other. We should unite and deal with those slippery men instead of being hostile to each other here!"

A girl with black-rimmed glasses and a high ponytail made a very clear-headed speech.

Shirley glanced at her and gave her a thumbs up.

This era needed such women. Only in this way could women be respected more in the workplace.

The elevator arrived. Shirley raised her chin, straightened her back, and walked in with an imposing aura like a queen.

Shirley sat in the leather chair with a strong aura and a calm expression.

She looked at Cecelia, who sat opposite her, and asked directly, "You've been waiting for me for days. What do you want?"

"Do you need to ask? I want to take back the shares that belong to me."

Cecelia expressed her thoughts bluntly.

Shirley shrugged. "I have no objection to it. I can transfer your shares back to you...!"

"No, no, you misunderstood."

Cecelia pushed up her glasses. There was a shrewd look in her eyes. "We both know what a mess Korita Group is in now. I don't want my shares back. I want money."

Shirley smiled and took a sip of coffee. "Interesting. I don't quite understand. What mess is Korita Group in so you want out?"

"You tell me."

Cecelia was full of resentment and said disdainfully, "Korita Group has been losing money for years, but you still insist on building the R&D and production centers. It will only make Korita Group suffer more losses..."

“Besides, yesterday, everyone knew that you and Braden, the president of the Stewart Group, are not on good terms. You crossed the boss of the Stewart Group. Will he spare you?”

“The most irritating thing is that even my brother quit. If I stay, I will be the biggest fool!”

When Shirley heard the woman’s scolding, she didn’t get angry. She nodded, “What you said is reasonable. This is indeed a tricky problem that can’t be avoided.”

Cecelia twisted her lip and continued proudly, “I heard that you got a sum of money and helped my brother pay off the debts he owed to the bank. You’re capable, after all. Since you’re so kind, pay my debts too. If you can get tens of billions, it should be easy for you to pay my debts.”

The girl pushed up her black-rimmed glasses and looked at Shirley with a sincere expression. She explained, "Because I think that Korita Group has a very promising future. Although its scale is not big now and it's not making a profit, its strategic layout is forward-looking. I hear that it's going to establish its own production and research center. Only a handful of companies in Seattle City dare to do this. The Stewart Group is one of them..."

"Therefore, I think Korita Group will become a big company that can rival the Stewart Group. This is the right time for me to join it!"

The girl's words were ridiculed by the employees.

The director of the public relations department even embarrassed Shirley by saying, "Little girl, you are too young to understand how terrible it is to work for the wrong boss. Ms. Wilson is not a successful businesswoman. She is just a woman who has a tragic fate and got abandoned by a rich family. Now, even Mr. Parker, who always supported her before, and Ms. Parker have withdrawn their money and quit. Doesn't that give you a hint?"

"They left because they are short-sighted. I believe in my judgment and have faith in Ms. Wilson!"

The girl's tone was very firm, and she was not affected by the employees at all.

Those employees who resigned packed up their things and left in Shirley's presence.

Korita Group used to have over a hundred employees. Only a dozen or so stayed. They stood sparsely. It was a sad sight.

"Ms. Wilson, no matter what happens in the future, we will follow you. As long as you stay, we'll work for forever!"

Chapter 328 Are You Regretting It?

When Renee returned home, she found that she had left her key in the office.

She had no choice but to take a taxi back to Korita Group.

When Renee arrived at the office building, she found that there was only a dark gray supercar parked in the open-air parking lot.

“Wow, it’s an Aston Martin one-77. Isn’t this car a limited edition? There are only three in the world How can it appear here?”

Although Renee looked plain, like a meek bookworm, she was very rebellious. She liked sports cars, rock, and extreme sports since she was young.

Therefore, when Renee saw this car, her eyes sparkled, and she could not move at all. She quickly took out her phone, ready to take a few photos.

After taking dozens of photos, she suddenly realized that the owner was sitting inside.

Renee immediately blushed, and she bowed to apologize to the owner.

“I’m sorry for interrupting you!”

Renee turned around and was about to leave when the car window suddenly rolled down. A cold and low voice came from behind her. “Are you an employee of Korita Group?”

“How did you know?”

Renee turned around and forgot that she was still wearing the badge of Korita Group. She said enthusiastically, “I am indeed an employee of Korita Group. This is my first day at work, and I am the assistant of Ms. Wilson...”

Suddenly, Renee’s eyes sparkled. She pointed at the man and asked gingerly, “Are you the president of the Stewart Group, Braden?”

“Mr. Stewart, I admire you. I’m eager to see you. Today, I finally see you in person!”

Braden pursed his lips and was a little gloomy. “I’m not a celebrity. You are exaggerating”

“No. You are much more dazzling than those celebrities. Every year, you can create a lot of stars. You are unique. No one has ever been as good as you. You are perfect!”

After Renee finished flattering, she suddenly changed the topic and said sharply. “It’s a pity that you lost your judgment at a young age. You even let go of a perfect woman like Ms. Wilson. There must be something wrong with your mind.”

Are You Regretting it?

It was true that Renee used to admire Braden. But after spending a day with Shirley, Renee had been deeply impressed by Shirley’s feminine charm.

Renee looked around, but he did not see Shirley. She guessed that Shirley should have returned home, so she said to Braden, who was still sitting in Shirley's office chair, "Mr. Stewart, Ms. Wilson must have gone home. This is Korita Group. I hope you treat yourself as an outsider and leave early. I am going to lock the door."

Braden clasped his fingers and propped up his chin. His eyes were cold and sharp. "No. She is not home yet.

If Shirley went home, she would not escape Braden's notice.

"But if she hasn't gone home yet, where will she go?"

Renee was a little annoyed. She mustered up her courage and asked Braden, "Mr. Stewart, you insist on staying at Korita Group and refuse to leave. Are you trying to steal our trade secrets?"

Braden snorted in disdain. "What secrets are there in this small workshop that are worth me stealing?"

Renee was left speechless. She then said awkwardly, "It's true. The Stewart Group doesn't need to steal information about Korita Group. Even if it does, Mr. Stewart, you won't come personally. But you refuse to go. So, in fact... you are worried about Ms. Wilson, right?"

Braden didn't deny it or admit it.

"Do you have the number of Ms. Wilson's family? Why don't we call her family and ask if she has gone back... After all, it's getting late. It's not a good idea for you to wait here all the time!"

Renee was moved by Braden's deep love and suggested in a low voice.

"I divorced her a long time ago. I don't know how to contact her family. Besides... she is the only one left in her family. We have no one else to contact."

Braden sounded a little disappointed.

In the dimly lit basement, there was only a bulb flickering. The air exuded a damp musty smell. Mice made creaking sounds as they ran around the garbage dump.

Shirley lay on a shabby mat. She managed to open her heavy eyelids, and her head was still dizzy.

“Miss, you finally woke up. I was worried that my medicine was too powerful and would make you pass away!”

The man in a checkered shirt, Ralph Turing, pushed up the glasses on his nose and stared at Shirley, revealing a wretched smile.

Shirley wanted to get up, but she found that her hands and feet were tied by ropes. The most terrible thing was that she felt limp and had no strength. She could not get up at all.

“Why did you catch me? I don’t remember anything between you and me...”

Shirley used all the strength she had, but she could only make a light sound.

“Miss, of course, you have nothing against me. You are just unlucky to meet me...”

Ralph squatted beside Shirley and reached out to touch her cheek. The delicate touch made him excited.

“Tsk. Look at your face, your skin, and your figure... I’m willing to die if I can sleep with you.”

After Ralph finished speaking, he touched Shirley’s face, as if he wanted to enjoy all the things he had fantasized about for the past twenty years.

Shirley only felt disgusted. But in this situation, where she was bound and couldn’t move, too much struggle was useless. She could only think rationally.

Shirley let Ralph touch her face, and her eyes swept around.
